Two to three hundred Christians and Mohammedans were involved. The trouble broke out at the corner of North and Sharon streets.

The police made [illegible] are still working to discover just what started the conflict. For half an hour there was desperate fighting about the intersection of the two streets.

Stones and other missiles were thrown, knives flashed and shots were fired.

The dead man was killed by pistol fire. His name is Mohammed Dureo Habardin.

Another man is at the hospital, dangerously injured, and will probably die.

LEAVES MONEY FOR FEAST AFTER DEATH

New York, Oct. 14.—Philip Goldman lusted all the signs and symbols of mourning. But he would like his friends to remember him, so in his will, just filed, a clause reads:

"I desire that $250 be expended in some fitting occasion at some time after my burial, at which shall be gathered my relatives and friends, such as a dinner or banquet, and my wish is they should spend a cheerful evening in their recollection of me. As I do not regard mourning as desirable or sensible, my desire is that all signs and symbols of mourning be dispensed with."

Goldman, a cap manufacturer, left an estate valued at more than $100,000.

END $50,000 LOVE CASE OUT OF COURT.

Miss Emma R. Wellington, who was sued for $50,000 by the widow of George E. Williams, the insurance man, who led a dual existence.

Judgment for the defendant has been entered in the suit of Mrs. Sadie E. Williams, widow of George E. Williams, who sought to recover $50,000 from Miss Emma R. Wellington, the private secretary of her husband, charging alienation of affections.

The case has been adjusted out of court by agreement. Judgment for Miss Wellington has been entered in the Suffolk Superior Court.

Miss Wellington's name was linked with that of Williams, when sensational disclosures came to light, following the death of the insurance man three years ago. It was then learned that the man, who was believed to be wealthy, and the soul of honor, had been leading a double life for years.

In addition to his beautiful home in Braintree, where Williams was regarded as a model family man, greatly attached to his wife, it was learned that he had maintained a handsome apartment in Boston for a beautiful, young music teacher.

In the Summer, a cottage at Hough's Neck was obtained and furnished for the young woman. Williams also spent much of his time in Plymouth, where another young woman, who was known as "Mrs. Williams" was the object of his affections.

Expensive trips to New York and other cities, in the company of women, where only the most fashionable hotels were patronized, featured in the story that was pieced together, link by link, as the tangled threads of Williams' life became known.

It was found that Williams had left debts amounting to thousands of dollars, much of which had been obtained by forging notes for loans and assigning policies to secure loans without the consent or knowledge of the insured, according to disclosures that came to light in the litigation following his death.

His private life was found to have been none the less amazing, when it was learned that he had led a Jekyl-Hyde existence for years.

For a long period, it was found he had been spending money lavishly on women, maintaining establishments for them, and providing them with automobiles and blooded horses.

Miss Wellington's name was mentioned with others in this connection. She had been confidential secretary for Williams for a number of years, and when his affairs were investigated at his death, it was found that insurance policies, amounting to $12,500 had been transferred to her, some years before.

It was found that Williams had so juggled insurance policies that many persons believing themselves insured, found their policies were not worth the paper they were written on. In other instances, it was discovered that Williams had never turned over the money to the companies, that he had received from persons he had insured.

His scheme of campaign was so clever, that no hint of suspicion was directed against him. His income was large from legitimate sources, but not sufficient for the life he was leading, which demanded the income of a millionaire.

WOMAN WINS LOVE VERDICT OF $3,000

Nashua, N. H., Oct. 14.—Mrs. Rena B. Hazelton of Manchester was awarded a verdict of $3,000 here today, in her alienation of affections suit against Mrs. Bessie M. Mitchell, also of Manchester, from whom she sought to recover $50,000.

The jury was out twenty-one hours. Much sensational testimony in which kissing episodes and automobile rides played a prominent part in the trial.

Britain Now Controls "Rationing" of All Allies

By International News Service.

Washington, Oct. 14.—The British government has taken over the task of "rationing" not only Great Britain, but also the allies, so far as wheat and flour are concerned, according to a dispatch to the State Department from Consul General Skinner at London, made public here today.

This dispatch makes it clear that a British royal commission will "purchase, sell and control" the general allied supply of wheat and flour.

Flour and bread prices in Great Britain and eastern Europe have been causing worry among the allies for some time, according to recent dispatches received here and the question of the government taking over the entire supply has been raised from time to time. Consul-General Skinner's dispatch reads:

"Royal commission appointed to purchase, sell and control delivery of wheat and flour will operate in conjunction with allies. Australian wheat purchased and Australian government furnishing government owned ships for transport. General stocks will be imported in requisitioned tonnage at fixed rates."

URGE DOUGLAS TO RUN FOR SENATE

That former Governor William L. Douglas will be the Democratic candidate for United States senator was the belief in political circles today.

Following an expression by former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald of his willingness to retire in favor of Mr. Douglas, a delegation of prominent and influential citizens waited upon the former Governor today at his home in Brockton and requested him to become a candidate.

Governor Douglas at first declined, but the sincerity of the request so impressed him that he finally decided to withhold his decision for the present and to give the request his very serious consideration.

The following official statement was issued from ex-Governor Douglas' office:

"A delegation called on ex-Governor Douglas at Brockton this morning. At the conclusion of the conference, Mr Douglas declined to be a candidate for the United States Senate, but, at their request, deferred giving a final answer for the present."

Former Governor William Lewis Douglas was born in historic Plymouth on August 22, 1845. His father, William Douglas, died when the boy was five years old. At the age of seven, young Douglas was bound out to an uncle, a shoemaker. The boy was set to work pegging shoes by hand. It was hard work and a hard life. The little fellow's feet ached until his fingers, arms and whole body ached. But, by hard work and simplest fare, he laid foundations for health, vigor and character, such as enabled him to become a masterful and able man.

He worked from twelve to fourteen

The advance guard of the allied armada of 40 machines appeared near Obendorf-on-Neckar Thursday morning with the intention of attacking the Manser munition plant. News of the approach of the allied machines had been telephoned ahead and German war planes were ready to give battle.

At times there were so many machines in the air that the sun was obscured, and the roar of scores of machine guns in action at once coupled with the bursting of bombs gave the impression of a gigantic engagement.

The munition plant was not damaged, but a number of houses were demolished and five persons were killed.

AIR SCOUTS JOIN HUNT ON COAST

Liner Bovic Arrives and Reports Sighting a Submarine Chasing Passenger Steamer Hollig Olan

The United States aviation ship North Carolina, with a number of United States aeroplanes to be used in searching the North Atlantic coast for a German submarine base, and to assist in the neutrality patrol, arrived at Newport today.

The North Carolina will cooperate with a fleet of destroyers. Her planes did not get to work today because of the high winds, and because of the certainty that no submarine base would be established near the naval base at Newport.

The North Carolina will go to New London tomorrow, however, and will make her headquarters there, it is expected, for the next few days.

It was denied today that she goes there on the chance that the preparations to receive a merchant submarine at New London are really only a cloak for operations by which a fleet of war submarines are to be supplied.

DAYS DEVELOPMENTS.

The preparations to use aeroplanes in the neutrality patrol were the most interesting developments today. Other points, however, were these:

1—The White Star liner Bovic, which sighted a submarine on Friday, arrived in New York, and said that when the submarine was sighted it was pursuing the Hollig Olan, a passenger liner bound for Copenhagen from New York.

2—Persistent rumors came from Bar Harbor that a German submarine base had been established somewhere near Dyer Island, at Millbridge, Me.

3—Reports by incoming vessels that a large fleet of Allied

SAY ALLIES HOLD UP PEACE

Berlin (wireless via Sayville), Oct. 14.—"Our adversaries are responsible for this war. They are guilty if the war continues. Ours is a war of defence. Chances for peace at this moment are small."

Dr. David, the Socialist leader, has thus epitomized his views on the beginning and end of the European struggle in a speech in the Reichstag. He began his address by taking up the subject of peace.

"Our enemies want no moratorium peace before Germany shall have been annihilated," he said. "The unrestricted submarine warfare, however, will not hasten the advent of peace, but will further prolong the war. We all understand the fascination for German indignation against the English policy of starvation and against the English plan of warfare after the commission of peace."

HITS ENGLISH PRETENSE.

"England has always pretended that Germany eagerly longed for the war. For this reason the events which transpired during the last twelve critical days preceding the war cannot be described too often.

"On July 26 the world thought it could again breathe easier. Sir Edward Grey and Prince Lichnowski, with the consent of the Russian ambassador in London, had reached a basis of understanding. If the Austrian advance against Belgrade stopped the powers will seek by what means Serbia can satisfy those Austrian demands without compromising our extra territorial rights and independence, was the tenor of it.

"On the same day our Chancellor wired our ambassador in Vienna advising conversations on the part of Vienna and St. Petersburg, and declaring that Germany would decline to be drawn into the world war if her suggestion was not heeded by Austro-Hungary. Vienna accepted this basis of understanding.

"This was the situation when there came the news of the Russian mobilization.

"England's guilt lies in the fact that she did not send a telegram to St. Petersburg similar to that sent from Berlin to Vienna on July 28. Russia was sure that England would follow her."

Dr. David then insisted the peace would come only as soon as Germany's enemies were brought to understand the impossibility of the annihilation of Germany.

GERMANY "INVINCIBLE."

He pointed out that not all Englishmen share the views of Walter Runciman and others who preach a war of annihilation, and who after this war's end, he emphatically repudiated the idea that Germany could be conquered through internal discord and her own indiscretions.

"Ours is a war of defence," he exclaimed. "This bitter war is all right. We want the re-establishment of an independent Belgium, a Belgium independent of both England and France.

"We did not enter the war with a desire for conquest. We guarantee England that we would not attack the north coast of France."

Reverting then to the pre-war developments, Dr. David said:

"It is probably not known in England that a telegram sent from the German Emperor to the King of England which confirmed the assurances given by Prince Lichnowski."

"M. Jaures of the French Chamber of Deputies urged the French ministers, before the outbreak of the war, to bring pressure to bear upon Russia in order to avoid war, but his efforts were in vain.

"I maintain the policy for which Jaures died. Our enemies are guilty if this war continues.

"We hold that war is no adequate means to decide matters of differences between two peoples. We are persuaded that legal forms must be created in order to dispose of such questions. In foreign countries statements are current that Germany declines to adopt such legal methods. We, therefore, greeted with joy the assurance of our Chancellor in his most recent speech that he indorsed the idea of arbitration.

"If all civilized humanity were to adopt these views wars like the present would be avoided and we could say again and truthfully: 'Peace on earth.'"

WAR SUMMARY

There has been further heavy fighting on the Somme front; but the Germans still maintain their positions, not yielding ground at any point. The British made the slightest of gains at one point, while south of the Somme the fighting swayed back and forth through Ablaincourt, which town remained in French hands, according to the latest French report.

It seems clear either that the vigor of the allied attacks has decreased, or that the strength of the German defence has increased. But the mere fact that the Germans have once succeeded in completely checking an allied attack does not, of course, prove that the battle of the Somme is over, or that its end is near.

One thing is reasonably sure, however, and that is that within a few weeks Winter is going to make campaigning extremely difficult on the whole French front. By the end of this month the "Summer campaigns" of 1916 will be definitely over and done with.

The Rumanian retreat on the Transylvanian front continues; and from the Rumanian King comes an appeal to the allies for help—an appeal which even to London experts has a trace of panic in it. When Rumania entered the war she was undoubtedly promised assistance in men from Russia, and she was undoubtedly promised that an offensive northward from Salonica would prevent any overpowering pressure upon her borders. Russia has given her few men; and either because Greece still stands neutral or for other reasons the offensive from Salonica has amounted to nothing but skirmishes. England promised help to Belgium, and also to Serbia; yet those nations were crushed by the Germanic allies. The Rumanian King "prays" that the allies will not suffer Rumania to "meet the fate of either Belgium or Serbia."

The Italians report progress at a number of points today; but they do not assert that their gains were of any particular importance, and so far as can be judged these gains were merely the usual "clearing up" which follows a successful offensive thrust such as that of three or four days ago when the Italians claim to have taken a large number of prisoners and important territory. The Austrian bulletin on these operations is precise and definite. It locates the Italian gains "east of Oppachiasella," and says Novavas fell into enemy hands. Elsewhere on the Vippaco lines the Austrians claim to have held their ground.

'Rumanian Defeat to Lead to Peace'

By CHARLES P. BERTELLI,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Paris, Oct. 14.—That Rumania is defeated the road to peace will be wide open," said M. Radeslavoff, Premier of Bulgaria, to an interview that was transmitted here today.

The Premier's plan seeks the pull-off Turkey and Bulgaria and thus hasten the end of the war, but the German allies do well able to resist their pressure."

The Premier said that Rumania was badly surprised by the German successes, but that Bulgaria was not alarmed that she was sure of the final fall of Serbia. He added that there would be no relenting unduly over Germany's conquests in Rumania and Serbia.

cruisers and destroyers is patrolling off the coast.

4—Reports from Washington that President Wilson will issue a proclamation announcing that operations by German or allied warcraft just outside the three-mile limit will be considered unfriendly.

5—The discovery that although the Administration returned a sharp answer to the Allied protest to the American submarines without warning if they cruised in waters where German craft are operating, American submarines have been instructed to keep close to the three-mile limit to avoid trouble.

6—The arrival in New York of more than a dozen merchant vessels who said they had seen nothing of any submarines off the coast.

INTERESTING STORY.

The White Star liner Bovic had the most interesting story of any of the craft which came into New York harbor.

There were conflicting reports on the submarine question during the ship's arrival. The captain denied to reporters that a submarine had been sighted, but the pilot who brought the ship up the bay said that the captain had told him that a German submarine had not only been seen, but chased the Bovic.

The chase was followed for some time, but the presence of a gun mounted on her aroused the pilot to have saved the ship.

The last seen of the submarine, according to the pilot's story, she was chasing the Danish ship Helig Olav, which sailed from this port earlier in the week.

The Bovic is a British freighter and sailed from Manchester.

The Helig Olav sailed from this port for Copenhagen on Thursday, carrying many passengers and a general cargo. Relief was expressed in maritime circles that the submarine would not sink the liner, but that the vessel was being chased to establish her nationality.

CAPTAIN'S TALE.

Captain John Hall, the pilot, who brought the Bovic up the bay, told the following story:

"I was the bridge coming up the bay Captain Jones of the Bovic told me that his lookout sighted the U-53 while steaming about sixty miles east of Nantucket at 6 o'clock Friday morning. She was about a mile astern. As soon as the submarine was sighted the gun crew was assembled. No shots were fired, although the gunners were sure they could have sunk the U-boat.

"The submarine, after following for about a quarter of a mile, suddenly veered her course and started in the direction of the Helig Olav. At the time the Danish ship was about three miles away and could be made out plainly. From the Bovic got their last glance of the submarine as she was going at top speed toward the liner.

News comes from the naval base at Newport that the entire destroyer fleet of the navy would in all likelihood be used in the new "U-boat patrol" along the coast.

It is also announced that soon the larger ships of the Atlantic fleet will take part in the navy's "ring of steel" established here the German undersea raids off Nantucket.

CALL OUT RESERVE CRAFT.

It is stated that every reserve destroyer will be called into active service. Naval developments today followed word from Washington that the United States may issue a proclamation barring the waters near the American coast to all belligerent warcraft.

At Newport there are sixteen destroyers ready for the new service. Others are patrolling the New England coast on a double duty of seeking a reported submarine base off the Maine coast, and preserving American neutrality at sea.

The belligerent submarine off the New England coast, it was declared by the steamship Bovic at a time when the undersea craft was said to be dotted with munition laden ships just released from the embargo placed on their movements after the Swedish submarine raid off Nantucket last month.

The Bovic's report would place the U-boat about 200 miles due east of New York, not far from the scene of the U-boat activity of last Sunday.

BRITISH WARSHIPS ACTIVE.

This submarine was later declared to have been identified as a German craft by a returned liner reaching New York. This liner was signaled by wireless from the submersible asking her name and nationality. It was given and the question asked in turn:

"Who are you?"

"German submarine," was the reply.

Shipping and naval men said it is practically a certainty this U-boat was the same one reported sighted by the Bovic.

The reports of the belligerent submarine were coincident with statements of incoming steamers from European ports that a fleet of British cruisers and destroyers are off the coast in strong force and announcements that virtually the entire available destroyer flotilla of the Atlantic fleet of the United States was on neutrality duty.

Wilson May Bar U-Boats Along Coast

By International News Service.

Washington, Oct. 14.—It is declared authoritatively at the State Department that operations of belligerent warships on the high seas, close to but beyond the jurisdiction of the United States, may be considered by this government to be unfriendly.

It is pointed out that the British cruisers hovering off New York harbor and to which the State Department objected, were more than fifty miles from the American shore, but in the steamer lanes.

There is excellent ground for the statement that this government is seriously considering issuing a proclamation putting into effect a regulation affecting hospitality to belligerent warships somewhat similar to that of the Dutch government.

This would deny to such ships the privilege of entering American ports for any purpose whatever, except for repairs, or unless they should be driven in by stress of weather.

MAY APPEAL TO CONGRESS.

It is stated that an act of Congress will be necessary for this government to attempt to extend its jurisdiction over seas beyond the three-mile limit established by international law. Some authorities asserted, however, that the notification by the State Department to belligerent governments of the intention of the United States to consider unfriendly warlike operations close to American shores in a manner that would interfere with American commerce would have the full force of law.

No act of Congress, it was said would be necessary, as foreign governments cannot go beyond the State Department in seeking to determine the will of the American people.

The report of the Joint State and Navy Neutrality Board concerning suppositious belligerent naval operations close to American shores, being an hypothetical case, and arising from the activities of the German submarine U-53 off Newport, advises action discouraging such operations.

The report, a confidential and advisory document, was submitted to the State Department last Wednesday. The department will take this report under consideration together with all the evidence being collected by several government departments concerning the operations of the U-53.

SEEK RADIO STATION.

It is declared the government has no information confirmatory to the alleged affidavit of an officer of the British liner Stephano, in which he declared his ship was fired upon by the U-53 before the passengers and crew were removed.

Torpedo boat destroyers and other light vessels of the United States navy, instructions from fleet and squadron commanders to determine if any one whether there is a foreign naval base anywhere along the United States Atlantic coast. The search will be also for foreign wireless stations.

The question of a base for German submarines was impliedly raised in the allies' note to the United States recently published, which urged neutrals to bar all submarines.

Secretary of the Navy Daniels declares that no new orders have gone out, but that naval commanders are acting under instructions which they received a year and a half ago.

SNORES OF POLICE ANNOY EACH OTHER

Haverhill, Oct. 14.—Driver Justin Bridgham of the police patrol wagon can't sleep because Driver "Jim" Bolan, his side partner, snores at night. Bolan can't sleep, either, because Bridgham snores. Each shower wakes the other in the large room they occupy on the second floor of the wagon house and they keep the same working and sleeping schedule. Alderman C. Cook suggested a partition, but the Municipal Council has no extra funds. There is talk of raising a fund to buy two Maxim silencers.

Germany Is Firm for Rights of Submarines in American Waters

By WILLIAM BAYARD HALE,
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

Berlin, (wireless via Tuckerton) Oct. 14.—Dr. Siegfried Heckshar, the well known parliamentarian and member of the Reichstag Committee on Foreign Affairs, makes the following statement for the International News Service:

Curiously enough, up to the present we have been receiving our information regarding the activities of the German U-boats in the vicinity of the American coast entirely through the British colored-up Reuter bulletins. Here we have a further evidence of the altogether too frequently successful wartime efforts of the ingenious English cable in politics, inciting friction and distrust between the American and German peoples.

In the face of this it is well to reiterate that the activities of our U-boats in the vicinity of American waters is being carried on strictly within the limits established for cruiser warfare.

I do but for a moment imagine that the American government will yield to the British machinations or official pressure on this point.

The proceedings in the Reichstag reveal the fact that there still exists a difference of opinion between the people and their parliamentary representatives with respect to unrestricted U-boat activity.

You may rest assured, however, that the German nation and its parliament are firm in their determination that U-boat warfare, in the limits prescribed for cruisers, whether in the vicinity of Norwegian or American waters, must go on resolutely and unfalteringly.

We hail with just pride and feel boundless gratitude toward the commanders and crews of our U-boats, who, though thousands of miles from their native shores, have won even the ill-concealed admiration of our foes by their deeds of daring and tenacity.

ITALIANS GAIN ON EIGHT-MILE FRONT

By CAMILLO CIAFARRA,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Rome, Oct. 14.—Along the whole eight-mile battle front on the Carso plateau the Italians have advanced as a result of the third day of the big new battle, the war office announced today. It was added that General Cadorna's forces now are facing the Austrian second line.

The Italians that gained the western slope of Monte Pecinka are now trying to take the summit.

Advices from the Italian base at Udine tell of bloody fighting in the streets of Lavica and Boljunec, south of Monte Pesinka. The Italians penetrated the town, but met with strong resistance. The Austro-Hungarians had turned the stone houses into fortified houses, and machine guns trained to sweep every approach. The lines were so near that artillery could not be directed against them.

It is reported here that the Austro-Hungarians have lost 50,000 men in the past two weeks' fighting.

Incoming Ships Fail to Sight U-53

New York, Oct. 14.—Twelve vessels which have reached here within the last twenty-four hours report sighting of the U-53, nor of the flotilla of British merchantmen which have left this port for Europe.

Some of the British cruiser squadron and some of the United States destroyers have been sighted in the vicinity of Nantucket by Captain Lindeross, of the Russian steamship Hesperides, in from Huelva, Spain.

The absence of wireless reports from the fleet of vessels, and from the fact that none of the incoming steamers sighted them, are accepted as a good augury in shipping circles.

It is pointed out that this confirms earlier reports that the vessels were ordered to meet the U-53 in squadrons and then instructed to follow a secret course plotted for them by Admiral Montaez Breuning, in command of the British naval and merchant shipping on the Atlantic seaboard.

No word is expected from any of them now until their arrival at their ports of destination. The fact that no news was received from the Adriatic had a stimulating effect on the Maritime Exchange and the underwriters dropped their rates considerably.

From the official manifests filed at the Customhouse, it was learned that six of the steamers carried even more ammunition than at first reported. The total estimated value of the combined cargoes of all the ships was more than $20,000,000.

Greek King Fears German Conquest

London, Oct. 14.—"When a high diplomatic personage besought King Constantine to change his policy," says the Daily Telegraph's Athens correspondent," the King replied:

"I prefer to lose my throne rather than endanger Greece. I am convinced that in fifteen days Rumania will exist no more. If Greece went into war then, after the conquest of Rumania, the irresistible German forces would be directed against Greece and she would share the fate of Serbia and Rumania."

100 FRENCH SHELLS TO GERMANY'S ONE

Paris, Oct. 14.—General Nivelle, commander of the French forces at Verdun, in talking with Walter Hale, an artist, and H. O Beatty, director-general of the American relief clearing house of New York, at his headquarters, during the shelling of German trenches by the French, remarked that the French were throwing more than 100 shells to one thrown by the Germans, and that soon they would be doing better than that.

ARMORED CARS IN USE IN BALKANS

London, Oct. 14.—The British are using armored cars for reconnoitering purposes on the Macedonian front, it is announced here.

ABLAINCOURT SAVED BY FRENCH

Paris, Oct. 14.—German troops penetrated the village of Ablaincourt, south of the Somme river, but were quickly driven out by a French counter-attack, it was announced today in the official communique of the French War Office.

Further progress has been made by the French north of the Somme. The hardest fighting, however, has centered south of the river during the past 24 hours.

After violent artillery preparation the Germans attacked Ablaincourt and succeeded in making their way into the northeast corner of the village. Before the Germans could consolidate their new position the French launched counter attacks, pressing the Teutons back to their original lines.

The text of the statement follows:

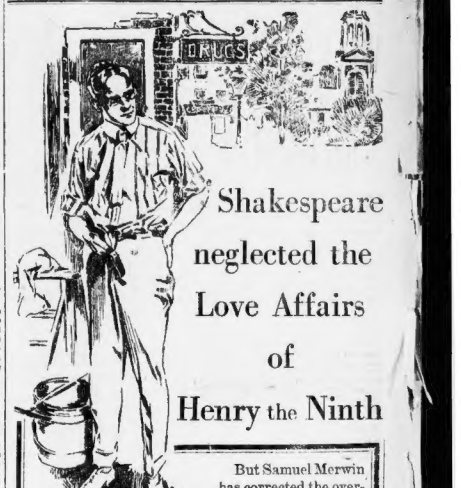
"North of the Somme we made progress at Epine de Malassise.

"South of the Somme the Germans, following violent artillery preparation, launched a powerful attack against our positions at Ablaincourt and succeeded in reoccupying part of the village and trenches to the northeast, but were completely ejected again by an immediate counter attack.

"There is nothing to report from the rest of the front.

"Our aviators bombarded Vouziers, Ardeuil and Brume.

"Sharp hindering aerial operations upon the whole front."



Shakespeare neglected the Love Affairs of Henry the Ninth

But Samuel Merwin has corrected the oversight. When it came to copping queens, the Tudor had nothing on Henry Calverly. He held forth and wholesaled in Sunbury where most of us lived at one time or another. For Henry is a type: there's a bit of him in you—if you dare remember back to the gangling days when romance first rode your heart and The One Girl came and went in bewildering variety.

He's a joy, is Henry, a magnificent privilege to know. In November

WELCOME BOYS OF SECOND AT SPRINGFIELD

Springfield, Oct. 14.—Thousands of persons, headed by Mayor Stacy, greeted two battalions of the Second Regiment, Massachusetts National Guard, when they arrived at the Summer street railroad yards, early today, after a four months' stay on the Mexican border.

Enthusiasm reigned in the heart of each soldier, as the train puffed into the station amid the shrieking of locomotive whistles, tooting of automobile horns and the lusty cheering of a patriotic crowd.

Wives, sisters and sweethearts wept tears of joy as they crowded into the station to greet their loved ones after their long absence. The soldier boys were leaning from every window of the train. They were glad to reach home, after six days and six nights spent in cramped quarters aboard the train.

SLEEP IN TRAINS.

The Infantrymen were forced to pass the night in the trains, where they will be held until it is time for the parade to form this afternoon.

The regiment arrived in sections. The first section arriving from Columbus, N. M., brought Colonel William C. Hayes and his staff and the First Battalion, under the command of Major Boekman. This battalion comprised M Company of Adams, F Company of Pittsfield, I Company of Northampton, L Company of Greenfield and the machine gun company of Springfield.

The next detachment to arrive was the second, commanded by Major Herbert H. Warren, and comprising A, H and G Companies of Worcester, E Company of Orange and the hospital corps of Springfield.

The parade of the regiment was postponed until Monday when word was received early today that the third battalion, consisting of three Springfield companies and a Holyoke company were "somewhere in New York State" endeavoring to get back on the main line.

In some unknown manner their section, during the night, was switched to a line that took them in a northerly direction. They are not expected in Springfield until tomorrow.

CITY CELEBRATES.

Every building on Main street, together with many of the structures on adjoining streets, is covered with decorations of flags, bunting and "Welcome Home" placards.

Major-General Embury P. Clark, retired, who commanded the regiment during the Spanish war, will act as chief marshal of the parade, and with his staff will ride at the head of the column. Following him will march the Sacred Heart drum corps, Company Eight of the naval battalion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars Association, which will appear for the first time in a public parade. Next in line will come the veterans of the Second Regiment and then the regiment staff.

BETTING FAVORS HUGHES, 8 TO 5

By International News Service.

New York, Oct. 14.—Fred H. Schumm, the Brooklyn betting commissioner, has announced the following odds for bets on election results: 8 to 5 on Hughes and 9 to 5 on Hughes to win New York State.

According to Schumm there is an abundance of Hughes money in his hands. Most of it, he declares, is being wagered by New Yorkers who lost heavily on the baseball series. They are firm in the belief that they can recoup on Hughes' election.

During the past week most of the Hughes bets have been covered. The Wilson wagers are in small amounts, however.

J. J. Judge has laid $4,000 against $5,400 on Wilson, and declares that he has $20,000 more to place at the same odds. The quoted odds at the closing of the curb were 10 to 8 on Hughes and 6 to 10 on Wilson.

NEED TROOPS ON BORDER, SAYS WILSON

By FRANK R. LAMB,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Shadow Lawn, Long Branch, N. J., Oct. 14.—In a letter he sent to Gov. Whitman of New York, President Wilson declared that the "emergency" which caused the National Guard to be called out and sent to the Mexican border still exists and that all of the National Guard troops cannot be withdrawn from the border at this time.

"The emergency which led to the call of the militia was defined in my call of June 18, the possibility of aggression from Mexico and the protection of our frontier," the letter stated.

"This emergency still unhappily exists and I am advised by the military authorities that the withdrawal of the militia at any time from the date of the original call up to and including the present would, in all human likelihood, have been followed by fresh aggressions from Mexico upon the lives and property of the people of the United States.

"The militia have therefore been used, and are being used, to repel invasion and are rendering services of the highest quality and most urgently needed character to their country.

"It would of course be impossible to set a date at which the release of the remaining New York units can with certainty be accomplished. I am happy, however, to believe that the condition in Northern Mexico is improving and that in the near future will be able to do even more than has been done to relieve the embarrassments under which these organized militia regiments have necessarily suffered."

$5,000 BAIL IN 'SLAVE' DEATH CASE

Providence, Oct. 14.—Guiseppi Pesclone, the Aborn street pool room proprietor, charged with being an accessory in the murder of Cosmino Di Nuccio, cafe proprietor, slain by three gunmen Tuesday evening, pleaded "not guilty" today before Judge Howard B. Gorham and was held in $5,000 bail for trial on October 27.

Characters of the underworld known to the police as "Skinny" and "Brooklyn" told the police they would get bonds during the day.

The police received word from Chelsea, where it is believed Tomaseo Rossi, known as Tommy Ross, the wounded gunman, is secreted, which hurried inspectors to that city. Antonio Leoni and Mike Pontano, who were sought in the "slave" death case, are believed to have gone to Portland, Me.

Philip Fischel of Brookline and his friend, Herman Frank of Brooklyn, N. Y., who came over to Boston last week to see the World's Series games, were found guilty of larceny of apples in the Newton Court today and were fined $5 each. Frank paid, and Fischel appealed and was held in $100.

SHEVLIN'S ESTATE WORTH $2,189,675

'WIFE' PROVIDED FOR IN 'LEMON KING'S' WILL

The petition for the probating of the will of Gaspare di Cola, the "lemon king," assassinated near his Brookline home some weeks ago, was filed today in the Norfolk County Court by the Old Colony Trust Company, executors of the will.

In the will Di Cola made certain provisions for the woman known as "Mrs. di Cola," which whom he had lived for many years, and speaks of her as his wife.

But in the petition filed today this passage occurred:

"Di Cola leaving no widow and his only heirs-at-law and next of kin being the persons whose names and relations to the deceased are as follows: Giuseppe di Cola of Italy, a brother, and Antonietta di Cola di Lisi of Italy, a sister."

It was explained, however, that this does not presage any attempt to exclude "Mrs. Di Cola" from the bequests designated in the will. Mrs. Di Cola has already filed an appearance in the case. In the petition of probate it is only necessary to name the "heirs at law," the persons who would be heirs if the man making the will had died without leaving a will.

Mrs. Di Cola, according to Stephen A. Malato, attorney for Di Cola's brother, is the principal heir.

Bailen and Leveroni are attorneys for the Old Colony Trust Company, executors of the will. They do not expect any contest. Thirty days must elapse, however, before the will is probated.

TO VOTE ON BAN ON ALL DIVORCEES

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 14.—When the house of deputies of the triennial convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church went into session here today it was with the intention of not adjourning until action had been taken upon the proposed canon of the church prohibiting its ministers from performing the marriage ceremony for any divorced person.

The debate upon the question has been stormy, and heated debate was in prospect before a vote is taken, probably late today. The present canon on the subject permits the remarriage of the innocent party to a divorce granted on statutory grounds.

WARNS FARMERS OF LOAN FRAUDS

Washington, Oct. 14.—The Farm Loan Board today formally branded as fraudulent any alleged farm loan organization purporting to be connected with the government, that requires advance payments from farmers in connection with the new Farm Loan bank system.

The board announced that the Department of Justice had begun collecting evidence and that prosecutions would follow soon.

A prominent business man of Boston upon visiting the "Billy" Sunday tabernacle on Huntington avenue yesterday, offered to pay $25 for a seat for the opening night of the revival services, November 12. He made the offer to W. C. Manning, watchman at the gate. He was told tickets would be issued and that there will be many free seats all the time.

The choir seats are ready. They will be occupied by 800 sopranos, 500 altos, 300 tenors and 400 bases. Of the 4,000 needed for two choirs, 3,000 have already been secured and are rehearsing.

The "Trail Hitters'" benches are all in place. They will be headed by several clergymen. They stand directly in front of the rostrum where "Billy" Sunday preaches.

The lunch room, measuring 112 feet by 50, will be ready in fourteen days.

SUNDAYS DAILY HABITS.

The Rev. James E. Walker in referring to the daily habits of Mr. Sunday said:

"Mr. Sunday does not eat much. You would be surprised that a man of such vitality eats so little. When he eats his meals, he wants them on time. Regularity is his watchword about meals and about daily prayer. No one lives so near God as this man. He feels his great and serious responsibility. Those who know him best know how sincere he is, and how his plans are all made to win every one from sin."

"Billy" Sunday likes to eat an onion sandwich at the close of a busy day. He often follows this with a good sized piece of apple pie.

Boston ministers will hold a special "Billy" Sunday prayer meeting Monday in Park Street Church at the noon hour. This will continue on Mondays until the tabernacle meetings.

Baptist ministers will hold a Sunday prayer meeting in Chipman Hall at 10.30 a. m.

The first meeting to be held in the Sunday tabernacle will take place Thursday at 5.30 p. m., when the ushers in charge of N. W. Bennett will have a rehearsal of their duties in the tabernacle.

The Elks will meet in July and are very anxious to get control of the building.

VILLA GAINS NEW FORCE FOR WAR

By WILLIAM D. HASSETT,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Washington, Oct. 14.—Francisco Villa, Mexican military genius or outlaw, according to the varying tides of fortune, is about to come into his own again. Reports reaching Washington today from unimpeachable sources declare that, as a result of negotiations now in progress between Villa, for whose capture the United States has already spent more than $100,000,000, and Clentifico leaders on the border, the former chief will take the field as the commanding general in the new movement to oust Carranza.

Villa's adherence to the new revolutionary movement, which has been carefully though quietly engineered by the erstwhile unpopular Cientificos, was brought about, according to reports reaching here, through the good offices of one Dr. Romanoff, an Austrian soldier of fortune, who has been with the former leader, ever since the Columbus raid. Dr. Romanoff has just returned to Villa's headquarters at Cusi, some 35 miles southwest of Chihuahua City.

In his recent conference with Cientifico leaders in Northern Mexico and El Paso, Dr. Romanoff was able to make these definite promises in behalf of Villa:

Villa is absolutely without political ambitions.

YALE HEAD'S SON AT HARVARD LAW

Morris Hadley, son of Yale's president, has turned his back on the law school which his father presided over at New Haven to enter the Harvard Law School.

Young Hadley, who won a score of more prizes for scholastic excellence during his four years at Yale, is rooming in Dunster Hall, Cambridge, and hasn't engaged one of his work in the first year class at Harvard. For his room mate he has Kinley J. Tonen, son of the President of the National Baseball League.

Hadley, despite the Yale connections of his father, believes with Bob Taft and Charley Hughes, Jr., and other Yale men of well known fathers, that the Harvard Law School is the best in the country.

BOSTON GIRL IS FREED AFTER ACID HURLING

Detroit, Oct. 14.—Believing the story of Bertha Ullian of Boston, who charges that Harry Bennett, a boarder in her father's home, made love to her and then fled to Detroit, women of the Twentieth Century Club resisted the girl, who was cited for trial on a charge of throwing acid in Bennett's face, after she had followed him to Detroit.

The case was heard and the girl discharged. In the meantime, a suit for breach of promise is pending against Bennett, brought by Bertha in Boston.

Bertha's story is to the effect that Bennett won her consent to a marriage ceremony while the man boarded in the Ullian home. She alleges a fake ceremony was performed. Bertha threw the acid in Bennett's face as he boarded a street car with another girl.

Bertha and her sister, Jeannette, who came from Boston last Wednesday, left for their home.

Last year Harry Bennett, employed as a photographer on Court street, West End, boarded at the home of Mrs. Annie Ullian, Revere street. Their names do not appear in this year's Boston Directory.

CATCHES PARTRIDGE WITH HIS HANDS

Pittsfield, Oct. 14.—Senator John B. Hull holds the record, so far as known, of being the first person in this section to catch a live partridge with his bare hands. Two hunters put up two birds in a cover near Lake Ionel, where Hull was cleaning a catch of fish. One bird was killed. The other elevated and flew at Hull, who pulled it down with a barehanded catch. Scott, the shortstop wonder, couldn't have done it prettier. Hull will have the partridge mounted.

ELLERMAN BUYS THE WILSON LINE

London, Oct. 14.—The biggest shipping deal in the history of England has just been consummated at Hull, by which the Wilson Steamship line is acquired by Sir John Ellerman, chairman of the Ellerman line. The Wilson line was the biggest privately owned shipping company in the world, operating 54 vessels having a tonnage of 206,000. The figures were not revealed.

TWO ARE INJURED AS TOWER FALLS

Two men who were working on the top of a skeleton tower in the vicinity of the Chestnut Hill reservoir, fell to the ground today, and sustained serious injuries. The tower, buckled in a high wind and fell.

EXPECT PASTOR WILSON TO WED HEIRESS SOON

Parishioners and others friends of the Rev. Charles Chase Wilson, rector of the Church of Our Saviour of Roslindale, expect that the expected marriage of the rector to Miss Mary DeForest Clark, the Burlington, Vt., and New York belle, will take place soon, now that Judge Morton of the United States District Court here has set aside the verdict of $2,625 awarded to Miss Laura Louise Johnson of Minneapolis for her breach of promise suit against Mr. Wilson.

Meanwhile Miss Johnson plans to consult her attorneys at once on the advisability of an appeal from Judge Morton's decision.

Miss Johnson made this announcement at her home in Minneapolis, according to dispatches from that city today. She is living there with her father, Gustavus Johnson, a lumberman. She met the rector of the Church of the Saviour at Lincoln, Me., on a vacation trip last July.

Judge Morton's decision apparently removes the last obstacle to the marriage of Mr. Wilson and Miss Mary DeForest Clark of Burlington, Vt.

The marriage of Mr. Wilson and Miss Clark was postponed at the clergyman's request after invitations had been sent out in consequence of the threatened breach of promise suit.

Mrs. Wilson last night said that she was extremely pleased at the outcome of the case and that he had confidently expected it would result in that way.

Louis Crawford Clark, a wealthy resident of Burlington, Vt., and New York, and father of Miss Clark, expressed himself as immensely pleased with the decision of Judge Morton.

"It has come out exactly as we expected it would," said Mr. Clark. "The news is very gratifying to me, and I know that my daughter will welcome the news. We have never questioned the integrity of Mr. Wilson, and have been certain that the suit would be decided ultimately in his favor."

FIND 3 GERMANS IN COAL BUNKERS

Halifax, N. S., Oct. 14.—Three German soldiers were landed here last night by a steamer from Rotterdam, the Export News. They had been captured by the French and put to prison from which they had escaped. They were suspected of being on the steamer, and she was held at Dartmouth for two days and a search made for them without success. Two days after leaving port another search was made of the vessel and it was thought they were in the coal bunkers. Some of the crew knew of them and their efforts were finally rewarded with the men being discovered among the coal.

MAINE SUFFRAGISTS WANT REFERENDUM

Portland, Me., Oct. 14.—The Maine Woman Suffrage Association, at its annual convention, has voted in favor of asking the Legislature to submit to a referendum on the question of equal suffrage. Mrs. Katherine Reed Valentine of this city, daughter of the late Thomas B. Reed, was elected president of the association.

TECH'S BICENTAUR OFF ON RAMPAGE

Bicentaur went on a rampage today.

Bicentaur is the big barge used in the formal transfer of the papers and records of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology from the old home on Boylston street to the new buildings on the Cambridge side of the Basin.

Bicentaur was anchored in midriver, but some time during the night the big barge broke loose and drifted across to the Beacon street side.

There it was discovered at dawn, breaking off its own sculptured decorations in a vain effort to bump a hole in the stone abutments on that side. The Metropolitan Park police, with their launches and another which they pressed into service, set out to tow the Bicentaur back to place. They had a long, hard tussle, and more than once the big barge broke away before they got it—after an hour and a half of hard work—to the wharf on Read Valentine side in front of the Tech buildings, where it was tied up in safety again.

FITZGERALD TO QUIT RACE FOR SENATOR

hours a day and saved his meagre pay for his widowed mother. His shoe-making apprenticeship kept up eight years. He had three months schooling a year—or as near that as he was able to get when begging shoes did not interfere. He made splendid use of his scant opportunities for education. His mother helped him at night with his books so, in the end, he kept up with boys who had less work and more school days than he.

At fifteen the boy quit shoe-pegging, worked in a cotton mill at Plymouth, suffered a broken leg in a machinery break, quit cotton making and resumed shoe making. He learned the boot-making branch of the footwear industry in a factory at Chilton-ville, then was smitten with the "Go West" fever.

He had no capital but a pretty thorough knowledge of boot and shoe making. He went across the country to Denver and, for lack of other jobs at hand, worked in a lime-kiln. He saved enough to take him over to Black Hawk, where he met a master craftsman in bootmaking named Zephaniah Myers. He worked for Myers and finally Myers, Douglas and another man started a shoe store in Golden, City.

BACK TO MASSACHUSETTS.

But his native New England called to him and Mr. Douglas returned east. He resumed shoe making as a journeyman in a Brockton factory. He rose to be foreman.

In 1888 Mr. Douglas married Miss Naomi Augusta Terry, third daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Burgess Terry of Newton Lower Falls and Plymouth. They were very happy together. Two daughters were born. They are Mrs. Harry R. Russell and Mrs. Charles F. Richmond, both of Brockton. Mrs. Douglas was of a quiet, domestic nature. When her husband became rich she was able to indulge her philanthropic tastes. She gave liberally to charity. The Brockton Hospital and Day Nursery were among her pet benefactions. In addition she aided hundreds of families in a quiet way. She died on March 5, 1911, at the age of 61.

In 1876 Mr. Douglas had saved $875. He started a factory of his own in Brockton. It was 20 by 60 feet. It would be lost in the present mammoth Douglas shoe manufacturing plant. But it was a great undertaking for the young manufacturer, this shop of his own. He threw every ounce of his brains and energy into the enterprise and, in surprisingly few years, he was reaping ten thousandfold.

Even as his business was increasing and orders were coming in, the progress did not suit the ambitious manufacturer. He looked for means with which to speed up the business. The method he chose was advertising, extensive advertising, particularly in newspapers.

WINS BIG BUSINESS.

The result was an enormous increase in orders, business, plants and profits until the W. L. Douglas Shoe Company and its enormous factories in the Montello section of Brockton became known all over the country and abroad.

The man who grew up from the shoe-pegging boy was always active and interested in human affairs. So he followed closely political affairs of the day. He was a Democrat and his keen man and force of character made him marked early by local Democratic leaders as a good man for the local ticket.

He was elected to the Brockton Common Council in 1882 and 1883. Then he was sent to the House, and next to the State Senate. In the lower branch he introduced a bill "to provide for the settlement of differences between employers and employes." This bill was passed and was the immediate cause of founding, by legislative act, of the State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration.

He also was author of the State weekly payment law, which enforces weekly wage payments for employes in manual trades.

In 1890 he was elected Mayor of Brockton and was earnestly besought to run for a second term.

WINS GOVERNORSHIP.

He was growing steadily in political strength. He was a delegate to the Democratic national convention in 1892 and 1896. He was a delegate-at-large to the national convention of 1904, and that same year ran as Democratic candidate for Governor of Massachusetts. The Republicans elected their entire State ticket—up to the head of it. There they stopped. They could not meet the tremendous Douglas strength. The Brockton manufacturer was elected by a plurality of 36,009 votes over Bates.

FEAR BATTLE IN BAYONNE STRIKE

By International News Service.

Bayonne, N. J., Oct. 14.—Civil warfare again flared up in full blast here early today, after twelve hours of calm. At three points battles were fought between police and strike sympathisers.

Mrs. Stephen Popp, 50, died of fright when the police entered her house to search for weapons. She is the second woman to fall victim to the oil strike, and here is the fourth death. Mrs. Popp is the mother-in-law of Stephen Peregrin, arrested in connection with the strike. As she opened her door to the police a mob of a thousand rioters gathered, surrounding the officers. The police opened a volley from their riot guns into the throng.

Grave fears are felt by the police for what may happen today at the funeral of Mrs. Sophie Karak, who was shot dead Wednesday night while watching riots from the window of her home. The strikers charge that the fatal shot was fired by a policeman. A force of 150 policemen has formed a ring around the house where the funeral is to take place.

Serious trouble also is looked for as a result of the strikers' mass meeting this afternoon.

A thousand strikers threw themselves in the path of the oil company wagons. Firemen shot over the rioters' heads, without result. Then they aimed lower and shot to kill. The rioters cut the harness of the first wagon and the animals dashed up the street. More than 200 shots were exchanged before the strikers finally dispersed.

OVER 2,000 SIGN FULLER'S PAPERS

Since Alvan T. Fuller of Malden announced his intention Wednesday afternoon of entering the congressional campaign as an independent against present Congressman Roberts of the Ninth Congressional District, over 2,000 voters of the district had signed his nomination papers by 6 o'clock Friday night. The primaries having passed, it became necessary for Mr. Fuller to take out special papers and obtain about 700 endorsers in forty-eight hours. The result was that he received nearly three times as many signers as required.

N. Y. MILK STRIKE WON BY FARMERS

By International News Service.

New York, Oct. 14.—The milk strike came to an end today. The farmers and small dairymen have won. The four big distributing companies in greater New York have agreed to give the farmers an increase of about 45 per cent. over the former price paid for the commodity.

The strike, which started about eleven days ago, caused great hardship in New York, where the milk and cream supply was cut one-half.

The farmers and dairymen lost about $500,000 by refusing to bring their product into the city. The four distributing companies, who deliver half the milk consumed in New York, lost an equal amount.

The tieup ended shortly after midnight when the distributing concerns agreed to grant the increase and also to the naming of a permanent committee to determine in future all prices of milk as regards farmers, dairymen and distributors. The members of the committee will be farmers and two dealers. The fifth will be chosen by the four.

Wounds Kill Lord Clive.

London, Oct. 14.—Viscount Clive (Percy Robert Herbert), eldest son of the fourth Earl of Powis, is dead at London from wounds received in action.

Dr. Satterlee Is Martyr to Science

By International News Service.

New York, Oct. 14.—Dr. Francis Leroy Satterlee, Jr., pioneer maker of X-ray pictures, is to undergo another operation next Tuesday in an effort to check a disease he contracted in his scientific researches.

After a conference with Dr. Robert Abbe, the famous cancer expert, Dr. Satterlee decided to have the stub of the second finger of his right hand amputated. Two joints of this finger had been cut off in previous operations.

Dr. Satterlee is a cousin of Herbert L. Satterlee, who married a daughter of the late J. P. Morgan. He is a well known radiologist and was one of the first to make X-ray pictures in 1897. He was burned by the rays. The burns caused a disease known as kerotosis. It causes wart-like growths and has been known to develop into cancer.

"If the joint of my finger to be removed shows symptoms of cancer," said Dr. Satterlee, "I shall have to have my hand amputated."

MANY OF N. Y. CLERGY OPPOSE SUNDAY

New York, Oct. 14.—Many of the leading clergymen in this city are opposed to the Rev. Billy Sunday coming to New York to conduct a revival. The evangelist has arranged to hold services here beginning April 1 next and continuing through three months.

A poll was taken some time ago of all the Protestant clergymen in the city to learn whether they approved of Mr. Sunday. A great many did not answer at all, but of 200 who did send replies 45 per cent. were opposed and 55 were in favor of the services here.

One of the Presbyterians opposed is Rev. Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst of the Madison Square Church. Rev. Dr. William P. Merrill of the Brick Presbyterian Church will not go in any committees. Of the Baptists, Rev. Dr. Oscar Haywood of the Collegiate Church and the new president of the Baptist Preachers' Association, is not in sympathy with Mr. Sunday. Rev. Dr. Charles E. Jefferson of the Broadway Congregational Tabernacle has made his vehement disapproval of Mr. Sunday a matter of record by writing against his methods.

TWO ALARMS FOR RAG-BAG FIRE

The entire Revere fire department was called out by a double alarm sent in for a smudge in a bag of rags. This was in a clothes closet in the home of Frank Masser at No. 276 Fenno street, near the Chelsea line. While Mr. Masser was putting out the blaze his young son ran over to Box 23, pulled in an alarm and kept his hand on the hook, which caused a second call to be sounded. This brought all the plain and fancy fire apparatus Revere boasts on a run clear to the outskirts. When they arrived there was no fire, no damage and no cause, so far as known.

Told in Their Own Words

How Hughes and Roosevelt Would Have Acted With Germany, England, Mexico

Out of the din and confusion caused by the assertions, charges, and counter-charges which are being made by the Presidential candidates and their supporters, arises one question which many thousands of people are asking, and that is: "Just What Action Would Mr. Hughes or Mr. Roosevelt Have Taken in Dealing with Germany, England, and Mexico, Had They Been in Mr. Wilson's Place?"

With a view to throwing light on this subject, the editors of THE LITERARY DIGEST have carefully analyzed the speeches of Mr. Hughes, Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Wilson bearing upon our foreign relations.

In THE LITERARY DIGEST for October 14, the result is given in a very comprehensive article in which are arranged in careful juxtaposition the public utterances of each of the three men upon the subject of our foreign relations. By means of this orderly arrangement the American public can get a very definite answer to the question raised.

Among other important articles in this exceptionally interesting number are:

The Appeal of "The Digest" is as Universal as its Scope

There is an old saying that it is impossible to please everybody, which is measurably true. There are exceptions to this, however. One of these is THE LITERARY DIGEST. When you take it home every week you know you will please the whole family. Each issue contains matter for all tastes and for every taste. For father there is the political section, the foreign comment, the discussion of industrial and social issues of moment, and the advice on finance and investments; for mother, the articles on art, and literature, and religion and social service, and the book reviews; for the elder boy, science and invention, the war reports, and Personal Glimpses; for the elder girl, the art, music and current poetry; for the youngsters, the cartoons and the nuggets of humor in Spice of Life. And every page is clean, interesting and packed with information. The news is real news, the comments are from all angles, the mirth without a sting. All this makes "The Digest" the ideal home news-magazine.

GREATER JOY IS HOPE OF MISS FARRAR

Boston was tremendously interested today in the news from Chicago of Geraldine Farrar's delightful secret.

"Jerry" has hopes for something greater" even than singing fame.

The prima donna was at the opening rehearsal at the Chicago Auditorium of the Chicago Grand Opera Company.

The reporters chatted with her and asked her, as a matter of course, how she liked married life. The singer was married on February 3 last to Lou Tellegen, the actor.

"Jerry" talked with her accustomed vivacity.

"Married life?" she echoed. "I love it. I love it because I married the—the only man in the world. No, he's in California now. Had to leave him behind."

And then the prima donna revealed another secret.

"Can you conceive of any happiness or achievement greater than winning the plaudits of the public in grand opera?" asked the reporter.

"Oh, I hope for something greater."

"What do you mean?"

"Oh, something," replied Miss Farrar, with a knowing smile that spoke volumes of the hopes of a happily-married woman.

"My husband is the one man in the world. I am very happy and becoming younger every day," continued Miss Farrar.

Then her cue came, and she went in to rehearsal.

FORGIVES HUSBAND SHE TRIED TO SHOOT

The domestic troubles of the Ferro family were aired in the Roxbury court today, where Mrs. Eva Ferro of No. 625 Columbus avenue, was charged with assault with a loaded revolver, with intent to kill her husband, Sabbatino, who was charged with carrying a blackjack. Pleas of guilty were entered. Judge Hayden continued the cases until December 16. Jealousy on the part of Mrs. Ferro was responsible for the trouble. It reached its climax when she fired two shots at her husband on a street in the South End. Neither one took effect. A reconciliation has been affected and the couple seemed on the best of terms today in court. They left for home arm in arm.

EXPECT MILK STRIKE IN PITTSBURGH, PA.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 14.—Believing that a milk strike on Monday morning is inevitable, Pittsburgh dealers today were endeavoring to make arrangements to secure a supply from other sources than the Northern Ohio Milk Producers' Association, which furnishes about 85 per cent. of the milk used in the city. The dealers are negotiating with Ohio producers not allied with the Dairymen's Association and with various western Pennsylvania dairymen.

Referee—Tufts, Brown. Umpire—Williams, Pennsylvania. Head linesman—Phelps, Dartmouth. Extra official—Cannell, Tufts. Time of periods—15-minute quarters. Game starts at 2 p. m.

Harvard met its fourth opponent of the 1916 season in the Stadium this afternoon in North Carolina, one of the leading teams of the South. The visitors are coached by "Tommy" Campbell, the former Harvard halfback, who is installed at the Southern university as general director of athletics.

North Carolina made a bad start Saturday, losing to Princeton, 29-0. The Tigers scored a good chance to double the score.

"Speedy" Rush kept his regulars continuously in the game. The southerners held off the husky Tigers in the first and third periods, bad two touchdowns scored against them in the second, and three more in the third.

Folger, North Carolina's halfback, is a fine line-plunger, and in Captain Tandy the team has the All-South Atlantic centre. Coach Campbell, while in the South only a short while, has started the development of his team along the lines of the Princeton system and is looking forward to a successful season.

Flowers absence gave Eddie Casey his first opportunity to start a game. Casey's work as all-around back has been startling in his previous two games, but he did not get a chance against Tufts. At Exeter he was a star on end runs and plays that called for dodging, and, like Eddie Mahan, who comes from Casey's home town, Natick, he seems to the football manor born.

Horween, the veteran back, who was dropped to the sub team, got another chance with the regulars today through Rondo's absence. The latter is out with a dislocated shoulder. Taylor, the big tackle, is still suffering with a bad knee, and Lovell will start at left tackle. Wheeler is down to sub for Casey.

Since Coach Haughton took command, the varsity squad has been pushed hard, and the assistant coaches hope the players will demonstrate that their work hasn't been wasted.

If Harvard can continue through its schedule victorious, the Crimson followers will pass up the Tufts reverse, refusing to it only as an unhappy incident in the season's happenings.

Ithaca, N. Y., Oct. 14.—Cornell and Williams clashed on a muddy gridiron today. The visitors found the Red and White eleven with all of its varsity men in the best of condition.

The Cornell coaches, however, expected a strong showing by the team coached by Joe Brooks and prepared for it by a hard week's practice.

The new bear cub mascot Touchdown is getting fat, a good omen, so the players say.

ROXBURY TEAM IN FIELD.

The St. Alphonsus Association football eleven of Roxbury, is looking for games with the strongest teams in the State. Under the leadership of Walter Cleary the team is rapidly rounding into shape.

N. Carolina a New Foe
Harvard Man at Helm

By H. R. HARDWICK.

(Coach of the Harvard Backfield and Crimson's Former Star Halfback.)

Today Harvard welcomed a new visitor to the Stadium, North Carolina, under the direction of "Tommy" Campbell, Harvard '12, today attempted to prove the superiority of Southern football as compared to the Northern brand. Vanderbilt essayed this task a few years ago, in 1912, with little success.

The game does not afford so excellent an opportunity as the Vanderbilt game to judge the respective merits of Northern and Southern football, inasmuch as the North Carolina men have been drilled under the Harvard system.

It is safe to say, however, that approved principles in their play before the introduction of the Harvard system will have been left intact, as it is characteristic of both the coach and his former team that they are good in other styles and systems and apply them to his own. Thus we may expect something out of the ordinary.

Judging from North Carolina's play against Princeton last Saturday, in which they succumbed to a 29-0 defeat, the type of football displayed will be largely conservative, straight and sound football.

IT ALL TAKES TIME.

This is to be expected, as in the installing of a new system so much that is new to the entire squad comes up that a good deal of time is spent on the fundamental principles, and, as it is still early in the season, to look for an intricate and complicated style would be unreasonable.

We may therefore expect them to kick on the first and second down in their own territory and to "play it safe" until well into the middle of the field. This course was followed largely at Princeton, and as they had possession of the ball almost entirely in their own territory and as at no time seriously threatened, Princeton's goal, little of their strong offence was shown.

North Carolina was handicapped by its long train rides—last week to Princeton and return and this week to Cambridge. Such trips are not the best of assets to physical fitness and are apt to take the edge off the Southerners' best form.

Harvard entered the game minus the services of several players who figured in the Tufts build up last Saturday. Although some of the absentees are in condition to play, no chances will be taken, as an additional few days' rest will bring them about further. Or is better to be safe than sorry, and there will be need of every man in first-class shape if success in the coming big games is to be met with.

CHANGES IN LINEUP.

The two tackles, Caner and Taylor, and the three backs, Dopd, Thacher and Flower, will probably not appear at the start of the game. Their places will be filled by Wheeler, Lovell, Horween, Burnham and Casey respectively.

As there is an abundance of back field material to select from, there will undoubtedly be frequent changes, and, provided the game goes well, each man will have ample opportunity to show his paces.

The other positions will be filled the same as Saturday—Harte and Coolidge on the ends, Dadmun and Clark, guard, Harris, centre, and Benbouc, quarter.

Harvard will show a more polished and more versatile attack than that of last week, and it is my belief that the Crimson will get together and score itself. It will be a question of Harvard system vs. Harvard system.

HOLY CROSS OUT TO FLAY ARMY ELEVEN

West Point, N. Y., Oct. 14.—When West Point and Holy Cross started their game today they had their famous 14-14 tie battle of last Fall to play off. The Massachusetts eleven was accompanied by a delegation of almost 100 rooters, and they were confident their warriors would be returned victors.

Both elevens took the field for the opening period with lineups consisting practically of veterans.

Andover, Oct. 14.—Harvard's freshman football team opened the season here today with a victory over Phillips Andover. The Crimson backs are nimble youngsters. Horween, a brother of the varsity halfback, is rated the star of the line.

Hadley, at left tackle, weighs 240 pounds. He was a star with Natick last Fall and was in his glory playing against his old rivals.

This was the first game Andover has played since Fred Daly of Cambridge, ex-Yale back and former Williams coach, has been in charge.

LYNN ENGLISH OUT TO THRASH LOWELL

Coach Harry Dame's Lynn English High School football team lined up against Lowell, at Lynn, today. The Lynn rooters have been looking forward to this game all month, as it was the first battle that afforded them a chance to compare the strength of their eleven with the teams in the Mill City section.

Lowell has played only one game this season, but felt confident of holding it down. The lineups:

English High's eleven played its first game today against Medford High at Medford.

Coach Dan O'Flaherty was confident his charges would make a splendid showing despite the fact that they have only been practicing since last Monday.

The backfield, which has been giving O'Flaherty the most worry, has been shifted around considerably. It is composed of "Brick" O'Hare, Nolan, Gunning and Captain Bridges. This backfield is considered by many expected to be a hard proposition for the Medford warriors to step.

Coaches Manfield and Brawley gave the Medford squad only light practice yesterday on account of the game played Columbus Day against Worcester Trade.

Feeling mighty good over their splendid showing Columbus Day morning against Beverly High, Everett High faced Woburn today with renewed confidence.

Although without the services of High Bond and Captain Fred Marshall, "Ginger" Fraser is doing good work as Everett's tutor. He is doubtful if either Bond or Marshall will represent Everett in football again this Fall.

Two Somerville Stars Are Out

Somerville High team faced Bridgewater Normal at Recreation Field, West Somerville, today.

Somerville lined up without two of its best players, Captain Ned Keating and Downey. Keating is out with a torn tissue of the right shoulder, while Downey is suffering from a wrenched knee.

New Haven, Ct., Oct. 14.—It was the hope of Lehigh's football gladiators that in the struggle with Yale here today it would get more breaks of the game than have come to her the past week.

Hard luck stories during the football season are usually taken with a grain of salt, but the Brown and White is now experiencing a real one.

Practically no advance has been made by the Green eleven this Fall, due to the fact that Coach Tom Keady has been indisposed. Hoping against hope, Keady has expected to get rid of his stack of tonsilitis in a short time, but it got worse, and for several days he has been compelled to issue orders from his bedroom in the Bethlehem.

He was not able to come to New Haven with the team. Quite a different eleven from the veteran team which last year held Yale to a 7-6 score was the line-up the White team that played Yale today. Seven of the eleven players were men who have yet to undergo a real test.

Yale presented the same eleven which submerged Virginia last Saturday, with two exceptions. Taft supplanted Maurice Smith at centre. Smith was slightly injured last week. Addison Cambridge, who was not in tip-top condition last week, returned to fullback. Rex Hutchinson, who played fullback last week, is in the hospital with a sore throat, but will report Monday.

Taft Sees Son in Yale Practice

New Haven, Ct., Oct. 14.—Ex-President William Howard Taft witnessed his first football practice at Yale since he was an undergraduate—in 1878, to be exact.

He appeared at the secret practice, but donned no football togs in obtaining entrance to the field and took an active interest in following the hour's drill up and down the gridiron.

Additional interest was lent to Professor Taft's football enthusiasm by the selection of his son, Charley, for centre rush on the Yale eleven in today's game with Lehigh. His father not only saw him practice yesterday, but hopes to be able to shape his engagements so that he can see him play.

WEYMOUTH 19, QUINCY 6.

Weymouth High won from Quincy High at Weymouth, 19-6. Curtis, Mauro and Richardson scored the touchdowns for the winners. Curtin kicked a single goal. Le Cain went over for Quincy, but goal was missed.

Tufts on with Tigers
Capt. Wescott in Game

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 14.—Because of the fact that the Tufts football aggregation a week ago went to Cambridge and beat the Haughtonless Harvard team, showing a burst of speed and a perfection of forward and lateral passing that bewildered the senses of the Crimson, its game with Princeton today was watched with more than usual interest.

It was expected to be one of those clashes which will enable the dopester to draw early season comparisons, and here at Old Nassau the Tigers took the game with considerable seriousness.

The Tufts team was full of confidence since it downed Harvard and is counting on messing up a few more of the big fellows with what they consider the strongest lineup Tufts has presented in years.

Coach "Speedy" Rush of Princeton is counting on a clean sweep this season, and was somewhat perturbed at the strength which Tufts showed at the start. There was in prospect for Princeton a harder early season game than they had figured on.

A TEAM OF VETERANS.

Behind their serious and gloomy front there is a considerable amount of optimism this Fall. Princeton is massing a nearly all-veteran eleven. They have found that was left intact from last year and a likely looking line.

Eddie Casey during the week earned his first chance of calling signals against Tufts, but Jones was expected to replace him as the game ends.

Driggs is a fixture at fullback, and Dillenbeck and Brown were the halfbacks.

Tibbott may get in for the first time this season, as he is gradually recovering from his injury and is a hard-working football player. Thomas and Mathias are next in line for the back field.

Highley and Wilson started at the wing positions, but Funk and Winn probably will play about half the game.

Tufts went into the game with its full strength on the gridiron. Captain Wescott has entirely recovered from his injuries in the Harvard game and was a star right half. Izzi, substitute quarterback, who was reported badly injured early in the week, is in trim for the fray, and if Drummey is disabled will undoubtedly be the man who will call the signals.

TWO STAR PUNTERS.

A close punting duel was expected between Dunn of Tufts and Driggs of Princeton. However, if Doane kicks as well as he did in the Harvard game he will have the edge.

Tufts was expected to use the open game almost entirely and was relying much on its entire newness to the Tiger crew for its effectiveness.

Much depended on this game for Tufts. Whether its sensational victory last Saturday was due to the under-estimation of the Harvard team, or whether Tufts has a strong, sporty team will be conclusively proven.

Princeton is a much stronger and better developed team than the Tufts son and has the added asset of having already won two victories this Fall.

It must be considered, too, that this is only Tufts' second game of the season.

POWDER POINT TEAM CALLS ON POMFRET

Pomfret, Ct., Oct. 14.—The Powder Point School eleven of Duxbury played Pomfret School here today. Powder Point lined up as follows: Orde, r.e.; Viele, r.t.; Whitney, r.g.; Hile, c.; Doney, l.g.; Laurence, l.t.; White, l.e.; Tage, q.b.; McCeland, r.h.b.; Lane, l.h.b; Green, f.b.

CRANE EXETER CAPTAIN.

Exeter, N. H., Oct. 14.—Douglas L. Crane, left tackle on the 1915 Exeter Academy eleven, has been chosen captain of this Fall's team. Crane is the third selection, Bauman entering Yale and Wehner now being in Germany.

Hanover, N. H., Oct. 14.—The big Green's gridiron was water-soaked as a result of last night's rain, for today's game with the Massachusetts Aggies.

Coach Cavanaugh considers that his machine is going plenty fast enough for mid-October, and, while he was not looking for a big score, confidently expected the visitors would be defeated by at least twelve points.

Dartmouth's new right tackle, who has been a whirlwind in the daily scrimmage all week, started the game, with Healey at the other tackle. Gile is in the middle of a youngster, tipping the scales at 212 pounds.

Cavanaugh did not intend taking any too big risks with his veterans, but intended to take them out rapidly. The Aggies came to Hanover accompanied by a big delegation of rooters and were hopeful of giving the Green a stiff tussle.

GROTON BOYS GAIN DRAW MAKING BOW

Groton, Oct. 14.—Groton School opened its football season by holding the Harvard second eleven to a 0-0 score. Numerous fumbles were made by both sides. Lockwood, Ashburn and Foster excelled for Groton, while Rudman and Johnson starred for Harvard.

Providence, Oct. 14—Today's clash between Brown and Amherst is confidently expected to prove the most interesting game of the local season.

Amherst caught a much heavier Brown team off its guard early last season and won, 7-0. While there was no fear expressed among Brown rooters as to the outcome of the game, the coaches were not looking for too easy a time.

Amherst always has a light, but shifty and clever team, which atones for lack of weight by speed and a thorough mastering of the fundamentals.

Only one Brown regular was missing from the opening lineup. Ward, one of the veteran tackles, has a bad knee and stayed on the sidelines. Annan, a clever halfback, who came to Brown with a big Western reputation, got into the game for the first time as a running mate to Pollard. Purdy ran the team at quarter.

In the line, Williams, a former Noble & Greenough boy, took Ward's place at tackle, with the rest of the lineup the same as it was last Saturday against Trinity.

At a big mass meeting last night speeches were made by "Daff" Gammons, Dean Randall, Professor Langdon and Coach Robinson.

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS

Few Clubs on Market Yet, Dame Rumor Busy

By JOHN W. MORAN, Jr.

According to all the laws of average, that peculiar something which resulted in Brooklyn winning the National League pennant, the baseball season is over and the sporting pages are expected to loom up with much regarding other lines of sport. However, there has never been an injunction issued against someone's selling a ball club for someone else.

Already rumors have started flying to the effect that this club, or that club, would be sold during the Winter months. To the best of the writer's knowledge and belief there has been but one president who has announced his intention of retiring from the game. That one is C. H. Ebbets of Brooklyn.

Ebbets told the writer personally he would sell the Dodgers if he received a sufficient amount of money. James E. Gaffney told the writer he would buy if the price asked wasn't too much. That's how the matter stands this October morning. The McKeever brothers, who control 51 per cent. of the stock in the Brooklyn club, are ready to join Ebbets in disposing of their interest.

While we have not seen it printed as yet, we feel that ere long some scribe or other will set about the task of telling Joe Lannin's ball club for him. Its our opinion that President Lannin has not expressed any desire to sell that is, not of recent date, at least.

He may be tiring of the game and it may be he will want to sell. If he does he will let the fact become known in the regular way.

ALL NEWS TO LANNIN.

Yesterday rumors came out of New York and Philadelphia to the effect that Ban Johnson, lord of all he surveys in baseball, had decreed that Lannin must pass out of baseball. If that be a fact, Lannin knows nothing about it, for Big Ban didn't make any such remarks to him or to anyone who has as yet conveyed them to him.

If a man owns a thing it would appear an almost impossible task for someone else to force him to dispose of it unless he felt inclined to sell himself. Yesterday morning the writer heard President Lannin tell his ball players he would see them in the Spring. That would indicate that Lannin has no present desire to dispose of his holdings in the Boston club.

Lannin may sell his ball club and again he may not. The last time the writer talked with him he hadn't thought about a sale; in fact, he appeared to be thinking much about the outlook for another year. Lannin has prospered as an owner. This year the club made a large amount of money and it may be that he will want to take his profits for the year and a slight profit on the original investment and retire.

A. L. CLUBS PROSPERED.

While on the subject of profit made by ball clubs during the season just ended, it might be well to mention that practically every club in the American League made money. Washington, a team that finished almost last, was a money-maker. If any club lost money it was in all probability the Athletics, who hardly seemed entitled to make anything.

In the National League it is understood that the owners were not so fortunate; in fact, a strong rumor persists that some clubs lost in excess of $50,000. New York, with its two sports, most certainly made some profit, and a good one, too. Brooklyn, with a pennant winner and a World's Series share, was another money-maker.

Philadelphia made money through being up in the fight all the year and having a low salary list. The Braves, with a heavy salary list, and the loss of most of their attractive dates at home, couldn't have profited to any great extent. However, they were fortunate in getting into New York at a time when interest in the Giants was at a fever heat.

The closing day for that series was sizable as was the check for the series against Brooklyn on the latter's home ground in August. The last home stay of the club must have helped considerably and there were some small crowds that loomed large. However, the attendance in Pittsburgh, Cincinnati and St. Louis was disappointing.

THERE WERE SOME LOSERS.

It's hard to see how Pittsburgh, St. Louis and Cincinnati made any money.

Chicago, too, must have lost money, for the simple reason that Tinker had an aggregation of money-getters that would put a crimp in any owner's bankroll. The club started the year with enough players to form a league and a majority of them were drawing big salaries. From time to time they were dropped, but still a lot of high salaries went on.

In another year matters will differ vastly. Owners will in all probability attempt to cut the yearly stipends of their men; in fact, the report has gained wide circulation that salaries will be cut. It can do no harm here to be considerable of interest in the year to come.

Today the Baseball Players' Protective Association will hold a meeting in New York, and it may be that something will be done with a view to preventing any cuts being made.

The fraternity will not be so well able to stop the magnates now that the Federal League is dead as was the case years ago when the Wards and Harry Stevens were around with open checkbooks and flowing consciences.

Taking it by and large, the approaching season looms up large. News should be plentiful for the anxious and long-suffering fan who awaits the coming of Spring, now that the Fall is fast fleeting by.

NAP RUCKER PLANS TO QUIT BASEBALL

Brooklyn, Oct. 14.—Nap Rucker, who pitched the final innings of Wednesday's game for Brooklyn against the Red Sox, announces that his baseball career is over. His arm, he said, pained, and a good one, too, Brooklyn, with a pennant winner and a World's

TOO NICE TO OLD GUARD

Expert Menke States That National League Would Prosper if Casting Adrift Dead Timber.

By FRANK G. MENKE.

New York, Oct. 14.—The only logical conclusion that can be drawn from the World's Series of 1918 is that the American League is at least 20 per cent. stronger in all around playing ability than the older circuit.

The Giants, 'tis said, would have given the Red Sox a harder battle. Maybe so, and maybe not. The Giants crashed through to a new major league winning record in September, but the majority of those games were won from disorganized teams.

The Giants went against the Dodgers in the final series of the season right after they had won twenty-six games in a row. And the Giants were beaten to a pulp by those same Dodgers.

So the natural conclusion is that the best team won the pennant in the National League; that the old league was represented by the strongest organization it had in 1918. And that outfit beat the American League enemy and was bumped into oblivion in five games.

Those who have watched the the World's Series duels since 1911 have come to the unanimous conclusion that the American League is a faster organization than the National; that it is stronger in every department.

Why? Launch Jones was the American league out for youngsters, develops them quickly and keeps fresh young blood in the lineups all the time. The National, on the other hand, likes to hold on to the old timers.

The tendency of most National clubs is to get a fading star via the waiver route instead of grabbing a young star and developing him gradually.

In the World's Series the Dodgers could never rise to emergencies with any consistency, while the Red Sox always played their greatest baseball when such work counted the most toward success.

It was a young team against a fair team that lacked much in courage, skill and brains. And the result was inevitable.

$2,833 for Each Dodger Player

Brooklyn, Oct. 14.—The Brooklyn players received their share of the losing end of the receipts of the World's series money. Each player was handed a check for $2,833.47 by Manager Robinson, who also retained a check for that amount for himself. Catcher Lew McCarty, who was traded late in the season to the New York Giants for Fred Merkle, received a full share, as had been agreed upon.

The Brooklyn Club today started to refund between $40,000 and $50,000 paid by the fans for the third World's Series game in Brooklyn, which was not played.

When asked what he thought of the series, President Charles H. Ebbets of the Dodgers said:

"The better team won."

Anita First in Driving Finish

Laurel, Md., Oct. 14.—Friday the thirteenth had no terrors for the large crowd that assembled at the Laurel course. The public had a good day, as five favorites out of seven got home in front.

The feature of the sport, the fourth race, at six furlongs, was annexed by H. G. Bedwell's Anita, which won by a head from Auto, the favorite, with Lady Barbary third. It was not a case of the best horse winning; it was a case of Taplin outriding Joe Byrne right at the wire.

"Wizard" Bedwell came near putting over another good thing when Chevron ran second to Orpetth in the sixth race. If Chevron had won he would have paid 7§ to 1. As it was he paid 3§ to 1, a place.

LEVINSKY MAY GET WILLARD

Would Be Logical Contender for Jess' Title if Battler Stops Dillon.

By ED CURLEY.

It may seem remarkable, but nevertheless 'tis true. Battling Levinsky and Jack Dillon are going to fight! Now, these two lads have mingled many times in the past, but that's all forgotten. The managers of the pair have decided to let the past bury itself and start off on a new book.

Fair enough. Jack Dillon has waltzed battling Levinsky often enough to stand off the lickings Battling Levinsky handed to Jack Dillon. Therefore everything is even.

As far as history relates Levinsky took on Jack a month or so ago in Baltimore and earned a decision. Strange to relate Jack didn't give up the game, but kept on fighting. The score now stands with each winning six fights and seven even affairs, so nothing is more natural than the boys should start off again. There would be something to the steady meeting of this pair if one would drop the other for a count.

CONTRACT STILL HOLDS.

I know Jess Willard is shortly to bid farewell to the circus, and the champion would like nothing better than a fight, say of ten rounds. Now the big boy from the wild and woolly will be compelled to meet some rival.

If you go back many months ago memory will serve you that Jack Dillon was signed up to meet Willard. That seems ridiculous, but the managers of the champion agreed to the match as a sort of sledge to whip Frank Moran into line. Francis followed the parade, but the Dillon contract still stands.

'Tis up to Battling Levinsky to save the day. If the light-haired battler is fortunate enough—fortunate enough we say—to flatten Dillon, then there's nothing to stop him from challenging Willard. It would seem strange to see Battling Levinsky fighting Jess Willard for the title in a ten-round bout.

NORTHERN MEETING NEXT MONTH.

Still, fighting is a strange game. Willard figures to stand way over Levinsky. As far as we can see there's nothing to such a setup but Willard. Remember, however, there has been no heavyweight within the past few years that has come much to Battling Levinsky. We don't mean since we mean anything in particular. The scrap with Dillon is scheduled for next month, and in the meantime anything can happen. Still, you'll find that Battling Levinsky is ready for the clang of the gong. By the way, he's a sure sort of a deputy sheriff in Stratford, Ct. That's no knock, however.

LOBERT'S NINE IN EXHIBITION GAME

New York, Oct. 14.—Twelve stars from the best team in the National League, the team that most critics thought would give the Red Sox a fair fight for the world's honors than did the Dodgers, will appear in a double header at Lenox Oval, tomorrow. The team, under the management of Hans Lobert, who is leading the boys on a barnstorming trip, will meet the Philly stars. Lobert announced that the following men positively will be in the lineup: Burns, Kapff and Robertson in the outfield; Lobert, Hoolke, Fletcher and Konetchy in the infield; McCarty, catcher, and Schang, Tesreau, Rently and Perritt will alternate on the mound.

YANKEE ATHLETES IN SWEDISH MEET

The Oscar II arrived at Christiania, Sweden, Friday, and the American athletes will get their first taste of foreign competition when they meet the Swedish team in the first of their two meetings in the Stockholm stadium today. The American team is made up of Ted Meredith, Joe Loomis, Bob Simpson, Fred R. Murray and Andy Ward.

The Americans were refused permission to disembark for training when the ship was halted at English ports.

Devanny Wins in Three-Mile Run

New York, Oct. 14.—Mike Devanney, of the Millrose A. A., the former two-mile indoor champion, starting from scratch, won the three-mile handicap run at the athletic meet held in conjunction with the Bergen County Fair at Hohokus. His time was 15 minutes 27 1-5 seconds.

Eddie Mayo, of the Brooklyn A. A. who shared the back mark with the victor, finished second. Alexander W. Feher, of the Hungarian-American A. C., with a handicap of 65 yards, was third. Devanney won the 15 yards. The race was contested in a heavy downpour.

Nick Giannakopolus, the national cross country champion, and Charles Ferry, both of the Millrose A. A. also contested in this event, but did not figure prominently.

Father Knickerbocker's athletes made a clean sweep of the prizes in every event, save the medley relay race, which was a closed affair. The New York A. A. with 14 points, won the team trophy.

The Millrose A. A. was second with 9 points. There was a triple tie for third place. The Irish-American A. C., Salem Crescent A. C. and Alpha Physical Culture Club each scored 3 points.

Schupp Pitches a No Hit Game

Riverhead, L. I., Oct. 14.—Ferdie Schupp, star southpaw of the New York Giants, pitched a no hit no run game here. He played with the Giants against a star semi-professional team of Norfolk county. Part of the New York Yankees pitched against Schupp. The score was 2 to 0.

Although the game was played in a drizzling rain, there were about 3,000 fans out to see the contest. The game lasted less than one hour.

Kid Cotton Saved by Referee

New York, Oct. 14.—Had Harry Wills allowed Kid Cotton time enough to find an exit at the Harlem Sporting Club the former sparring partner of Jack Johnson might have disappeared before the referee came to his rescue. However, Cotton was there to receive the punishes and running away from the persistent Wills he could not even speak.

The referee stopped the bout in the fifth round, apparently to prevent Cotton from being rocked to sleep. In the all-round semi-final Ray Bennett outpointed Philly McNeice. They are big, strong young heavyweights.

Sheppard to Lose Job as Coach

New York, Oct. 14.—It was learned today that Melvin W. Sheppard, former champion middle-distance runner, who is now with the Sixty-ninth Regiment at the Mexican border, will lose his job as coach of the Millrose A. A. track team. Peter Hegelman, veteran walker, and Matt Gein, a miler, both members of the organization, will take up Sheppard's duties.

Fordham End on Brickley Squad

A new addition to Coach Brickley's Boston College squad is "Rube" Hall, former Fordham University end. He is remembered principally at Boston College because of the stiff game he played against the Maroon and Gold a year ago.

Hall also played on the varsity baseball team at Fordham and is expected to be one of Coach Sweeney's shining lights next Spring.

Tansey, varsity tackle, is laid up with a wrenched knee and will be out of the practice for a few days. Jim Fitzpatrick, Boston College's wonder, is spending the week at his home in Meriden, Ct.

BRITTON OUT FOR KAYO

Welterweight Champion Will Try and Stop Ted "Kid" in Armory Bout Tuesday.

Danny Morgan, manager of Jack Britton, world's champion welterweight, places six pounds as the limit that Ted (Kid) Lewis will last to his match with Britton tomorrow night at the Armory A. A.

Morgan sends word over from New York that Britton will enter the ring in the best shape of his fistic career and adds that his change in condition is known to the Englishman at this time.

Britton in his two bouts with Lewis has failed to stop the Britisher, and the champion will be needing to knock out Lewis to get a decision. Referee Billing, and there was clearly no stopped.

In their last fight, however, one of New York's fastest, Britton won in rounds, and Britton gave the Englishman a bad beating. This was the best fight the welterweight champion has engaged in.

Fitchburg Pace Goes to Earl, Jr.

Fitchburg, Mass., Oct. 14.—The free-for all pace was the outstanding feature of the day's sport at the Fitchburg Grounds. It brought together Grandale, Jr. brought together Grandale, Jr. and Fred W., two old rivals.

The latter horse is owned by Redmond Dewey of this city and a victory for him would have given the popular trainer-driver three heats had been paced. Earl, Jr., proved conclusively that he was the best John Cooney drove an admirable race with the son of Grandale.

Coasters Mabel, now in charge of Custer's string, defeated a good field in the 2:20 trot. Coaster Mabel proved second best, while Tom Mixture and Frank Williams divided third and fourth money.

The 2:20 race was marked by Harvel Allis with Dustin in front of the pack, as usual. The latter has won several months in succession. The card for today consists of the 2:14 pace and 2:25 trot.

Boyle Has Snap with W. Jones

Phinney Boyle, the Lowell featherweight, proved his complete superiority over Willie Jones of Brookline in a slow and uninteresting twelve-round battle at the Commercial A. C. last night. The bouts was of more than massive dimensions.

Boyle made the pace every foot of the way and whipped a worthy fighting to Jones. The Brooklyn boy took it without flinching. Otherwise he was all in at the end.

Bob Smiley stopped Young Bonna in the fifth round and Joe Dunkley finished Joe Meyers in the third and Johnny Morris took care of Jack Clark in the same session.

Harry Carlson of Brookline, New England's new lightweight champion, and Larry Hansen of Brooklyn, Willie Jones' running mate in McMurtrey's stable, clash in next Friday night's feature event.

FLYNN IN TRAINING FOR DILLON MATCH

New York, Oct. 14.—Jim (Porky) Flynn, who registered a knockout and is of a naturally optimistic disposition, hasn't a thing to worry about except that he is slated to mingle in the Queensberry arena with Jack Dillon, the well-known Indianapolis caveman, here next Tuesday night. Most people—hey, page Mr. Frank Moran—would look upon that as nothing short of disaster, but Mr. Flynn is training assiduously and expresses confidence.

Other citizens about to be executed have been known to eat a hearty breakfast of ham and eggs on the morning of the fatal day.

JOE IS CANNED AGAIN.

PROS ON IN GOLF FINALS

Hutchinson Registers Surprise by Putting Out Walter Hagen. Plays Barnes for Title.

New York, Oct. 14.—Jock Jim" Barnes, the Whitemarsh Valley professional, one of the pioneers in golf in the South, the Professional Golfers' Association Championship, Jock Hutchinson of Pittsburgh, in a final of Walter Hagen, the Rochester pro.

It was decided by a certainty in the semi-finals, when Hutchinson, playing Hagen, won from the star Burbank and 3 and over William MacFarlane, Boston Myer.

Barnes, who is a veteran of the game, has been one of the leaders in the Professional Golfers' Association since the formation of the Rochester Wanamaker series.

The driving power in the Hutchinson-Hagen match came at the start. Hutchinson, after a poor drive, but nonetheless put a long iron shot to the green. He could get down in three, and it was Hutchinson's hole. The seventeenth hole was also won by Hutchinson, although opponents was better than his drive.

The last hole was hard for Hagen. A half would be just as good as he needed to win the match, but he came to the pin for a foot or a pencil. Hutchinson was down in two, and Hagen, having missed, finished a couple of feet away. Hutchinson sank the putt for the match.

Wives I Might Have Been

The Wife of a Family Man Who Overruns His Home with Relatives

By JANE McLEAN

Sometimes I actually regret not marrying Terry Walsh. He was so dear, and so big and so sincere, and, most of all, so Irish. His face was serious, but when he smiled little wrinkles appeared at his eyes, and then, besides, he loved me. Somehow there is a fascination about being really adored.

I don't mean just having a man like a girl well enough to take her around. Any girl who is passably looking and makes a good appearance can have suitors of that kind. I mean the kind of a man who follows a girl around with his eyes, a man who would sacrifice anything to buy little things to give a girl, and who would take no pains to hide his adoration, because it just bubbled up and oozed him so that he couldn't.

My first meeting with Terry Walsh was when I was rather young, and it was my first romance. I thought there was nobody like him, but that was in the days when I was too young to be married, and I could flirt with anyone I liked without appearing serious.

WANTED A PROMISE

A very young girl never stops to think that a man who is older than she is has different ideas on the subject, and Terry did not want to let me go without making him a promise. Of course, I didn't actually promise. I was just a little bit frightened when I saw how serious he was. I didn't see him again for three years.

When Terry came into my life the second time I was then of the men one meets in the city. All the aimless round of frivolous amusement sickened me and I was glad to turn back to a man who was solid and had something to him.

But when I began to be serious myself there were other things to consider. I have never cared anything at all about Terry's grandmother, nor his mother, nor his sister; they were not at all like Terry, in fact. I always thought they took advantage of his goodness, but, of course, he could never look at it that way.

I was almost ready to throw over everything for Terry, and I should have done it, too, if I might have had a tiny apartment with him all alone. I could have laughed over doing my own work, and even making my own clothes, and I would have loved Terry more every day, for he deserved it. But I just couldn't have part of the family to live with me.

"I'd be willing to give them so much a week to live elsewhere," I said almost tearfully, when Terry and I talked it over.

But Terry said that his mother had no other place to go, and his sister was taking care of her baby, but that he had promised to share the burden as soon as he was able. Beatrice, Terry's younger brother was at college, and of course he would want to keep up relations with us in the city. Terry almost admitted this fact, and in my mind's eye I could see his sisters and their commonplace husbands making us frequent visits, and perhaps arriving just as I was about to entertain a little bit myself.

SOMETIMES REGRETS

Anyway, it's all over now, and if I ever do regret it at all, I regret giving up Terry. I don't think I loved him too selfishly either. I think it was just a case of being able to read the future. I loved Terry well enough to marry him, but I knew as sure as fate that as soon as it meant stretching my love to the extent of having his entire family precipitated upon me, I should grow to hate my life and incidentally be sorry that I had married Terry at all.

Terry loved me more than I loved him even, but he simply sacrificed me to his family, because he thought his duty lay that way. Perhaps I did, and for their sakes I am glad he held out. I'm sure I don't know how many girls there are in this world who are happily settled with mother-in-laws, but I do know this—no two young people should ever expect to live with a third party in the house. I have seen this disturbing element break up love and trust, and do more harm than it ever could benefit.

Easy to See

During a Shakespeare celebration a number of amateurs appeared in the great dramatist's most famous tragedy. Next day the principal actor inquired of a critical friend what he thought of the performance.

"It was great! Simply great!" was the reply. "As you played Hamlet, it was easy to see why Ophelia should go and drown herself."

CHECK THAT ECZEMA BEFORE IT GETS SERIOUS

That little patch of eruption may be nothing more than a slight annoyance now. But, if neglected, such things have an uncomfortable way of spreading and becoming really serious—torturing itch itching, burning skin troubles that make life almost unbearable.

So don't take chances. Nip it in the bud with a few simple treatments with Resinol. Usually the first bathing with Resinol Soap and dressing with Resinol Ointment stop all itching; and soon the irritation is entirely cleared away. Doctors have prescribed Resinol for over 20 years, so that it is not an experiment, but a remedy of proven value. All druggists sell Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap. But if you want a sample of each, free, write to Dept. 54-R, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.—Advertisement.

Coats Will Rival the Suit This Season

These Stunning Models Are Reproduced Here by Special Arrangement With Good Housekeeping, the Nation's Greatest Home Magazine

A few of the many smart designs in the October Good Housekeeping.

Every woman will find this latest number a source of intense satisfaction.

FUR was so successful last season in the role of high collars, it returns to the stage of fashion this year in the same part, but varies the round of its existence at the bottom of coats, as shown in this model; also, to be "different," it often forms deep gauntlet cuffs. The coat above is brown cloth and sealskin, with tortoise shell buttons. The cloche-shaped toque is of black velvet.

FROM the round little hat of her to the little French heels of her the manikin who exhibited this attractive costume was French. The coat is of plum-colored "sylvette"—a soft, long-haired material. The cuffs and belt, which ventures off into pockets, are hemstitched, and the collar is fox. The turban is purple cashmere with purple ribbon in points.

THE crown of this hat of black hatter's plush finally yielded to specific gravity and puffed over at the top. Of course, there are ever so many ways to keep warm in Winter, but one of the nicest ways is shown by the French coat above of burgundy velours cloth with a fox collar. Instead of going around the coat, the fox bands this season divide themselves into short sections.

DOWN through the corridors of her gloomy old mansion Jane Hamlin led us. I marvelled at the self-control with which she endured her awakening to the calibre of Clayton Boyd's affection.

When we reached the library where Jane told us her undesirable treasure was kept I fancied that I saw the figures of two skulking men outlined in the window. But I dismissed my idea a moment later.

It seemed very likely that I was hysterical from the adventure of the evening, and I did not want to make Jane's burden heavier by communicating my terrors to her. At all events, when Jane switched on the lights there was no one to be seen.

The room had an altogether different appearance from the semblance of chaos it had worn earlier in the evening. It seemed to be lying in wait for something.

Jane hurried over to the heavy screen which was set in front of the safe and, with Jimmy's assistance, she pulled it to one side. Then, with practised fingers, she turned the comb until the combination yielded up its grip of secrecy and the doors were thrown open.

Inside the steel wall was a little box-like machine resembling the portable typewriters one sees advertised as weighing only six pounds and doing all the work of larger machines. The queer little box before me could do more deadly work than the largest machine in all the world—that I knew full well!

The Fatal Third Button

The inventor's daughter leaned over the grim little black box and pointed out the various parts of its mechanism to us. At last she said, with a certain grim enjoyment and pride in her father's inventive genius, "If I should press that third button it would set the clock-work in motion—and in exactly one-half hour from the time when I touched it the poisoned gas would explode and everything within a radius of one hundred feet would be blown into atoms."

"You have your figures down pretty pat," said Jimmy. "Just half an hour for it to get in its deadly work?"

"Exactly thirty minutes," repeated the girl.

"And it carries everything within a hundred feet of itself to kingdom come?" asked Jimmy carelessly.

But more than life itself depended on those careless questions.

"Yes, father had it all calculated out to seconds of time and inches of space. An invention like that is too terrible a menace unless you can control it to the extent of knowing exactly how it's going to act when you set it going," said the girl.

The Anarchists Enter

Even while she was speaking, three burly men entered the window. They crept upon us so quietly that we had no warning of their approach. But before they could overpower us, Jimmy leaped across the room, slammed the door of the safe with a wild reverberation and twisted the comb. The secret combination held the infernal machine locked into the wall of the house.

Our assailants were masked—but newspaper intuition told me they were members of an anarchist gang. Even the policeman who captured him had been unable to identify Bethune Sverdrup, so closely had he kept his incognito.

The men who had captured us turned to Jimmy with a snarl and ordered him to open the safe again.

"Can't do it, my friend—don't know the combination," said he airily.

His particular captor gave his arm a quick skillful twist after the efficient method of jiu jitsu. That twist was followed by another twist of agony which crossed Mr. Barton's face, but he recovered and smiled serenely, announcing that he didn't know the combination and couldn't say whether or not he'd comply if he did!

And then my captor jerked at my hand with a horrible skill which tortured me. Jimmy struggled to leap to the rescue, but he was helpless to defend me. Again and again the torturing trick was repeated. I felt myself blanching with pain and I wondered vaguely how long I could endure.

And then Jimmy showed the white feather!

"You'd better open it, Miss Hamlin; we are at their mercy," said he.

I gasped in amazement and cried aloud my protest even while Jane Hamlin vowed that she never would do that. And now to the pain to which I was being subjected.

Again Jimmy repeated his cowardly order. The desperadoes who had us in their power nodded pleased recognition of his wisdom, and at the second twist of her arm Jane yielded and crossed over to the safe. She turned the steel knob to the right, to the left and then back again. She paused a moment and then repeated it. The door swung open.

Jimmy Takes Human Life

Jimmy crossed over to her side and reached in to lift out the machine of death and hand it to our anxious captors. I protested violently again, but no one paid any attention to me.

Jimmy lifted out the infernal machine, held it a moment as if in admiration and then handed it over to the desperate, animal-like creatures before us.

One of the men turned to him now with a question. "If we don't hurt these women, will you promise not to call the police?"

"I think I've had enough for one night," agreed Jimmy. "Go on your way—and the sooner the better, for inside of five minutes I might change my mind and summon a few cops!"

The men crept over to the window and sneaked noiselessly out of it, vanishing into the darkness from which they had come. With them they took the engine of destruction—and our revolvers as well!

Then I turned on Jimmy, and my fury burst its bounds: "James Barton! I never saw you act the part of a quitter before. Oh, I'm ashamed—ashamed."

"I couldn't stand there helpless—and watch you girls being tortured," replied Jimmy.

"You might have thought of a way," I began.

And then Jimmy looked at me strangely. "I did think of a way—it was a way I loathe because it meant the taking of human life. But it had to be. I pressed the third button."

A sudden flicker of comprehension lighted Jane Hamlin's face.

"Miss Beatrice," said James Barton, "I have figured out who those men are—they couldn't represent anything but Bethune Sverdrup's band of anarchists—the most dangerous menace to organized society and to law and order the world has ever known.

"I have calculated correctly they will hurry to their meeting place and give their booty to their leader. And then there will be great rejoicing, for these wolves of society will feel sure that they have in their hands a means to enable them to terrorize and to destroy. You said thirty minutes and a hundred feet, Miss Hamlin. In twenty more minutes I shall know that I have been the means of killing a dozen fellow-human beings"—

Jimmy sank suddenly into a chair and buried his face in his hands. Jane waited in silence. I was thinking to what strange paths Jane Hamlin had led me. She, I suppose, was thinking of her faithless lover and how strangely she had failed to keep faith with her dead father and careless happy-go-lucky Jimmy, was waiting for the clock to chime one and tell him that unprepared souls had gone to eternity that better men might be saved.

We sat in silence—waiting, waiting! And then the clock chimed one.

Anecdotes of the Famous

The Mikado of Japan is a thorough soldier, and has a wonderful knowledge of military tactics and history. When he was quite a boy he was induced by his father, the late Emperor, to take a keen interest in the principles of national defence. He was taught wrestling and was made to try his prowess with young men in the humblest walks of life.

On one occasion he was present with his father at a big wrestling tournament and took part in many of the matches. He threw all of his opponents until there stepped into the ring a young farmer's son of such a burly build that it was evident that the future Mikado would have a very rough time of it. However, he went manfully to work, but was decisively beaten, and had to confess that the farmer's son was victor.

After the match the late Emperor sent for the umpire, and, pointing to the farmer's son, who was feeling uncomfortable at having beaten his future sovereign, he said: "I wish to speak with that young man."

When the lad appeared before him, the Mikado remarked: "My son, henceforth you will become one of the companions of my own son, and will live and study with him while he remains at school, for later on, when he becomes Emperor, he will need many a man like you."

The heir to the imperial throne of Japan and the farmer's boy became the greatest of friends, and the present Mikado possibly owes a great deal of his democratic spirit to that memorable wrestling bout.

Not the Cow

The commanding officer of an English military station gave orders that no one should be allowed to step over the grass where the cow was pastured. The next day the general's wife, wishing to take a short cut, started to walk from one path to another.

"No one to pass here, madam," said the sentry.

The lady drew herself up. "Do you know who I am?" she demanded.

"No, madam," replied the impassive soldier. "I do not know who you are. But I know you are not the general's cow, and nobody else is permitted to walk on this grass."

Their Married Life

Helen Buys a New Gown Which Warren Thinks Too Loud and Babbie Backs Him Up.

Copyright, 1916, International News Service.

"Oh, but I wanted it so much, Warren," Helen protested, and I had to have a suit to wear to Cleveland next week, and I saw this one, and that was all there was to it."

"I'm not objecting to the suit," said Warren, stormily, "but the type of suit. You never used to buy things like that. I think that white costume you bought this Summer went to your head."

"Do you know why you think so?"

"No. Why, if I may ask?"

"Because I looked the best in that dress that I have looked in anything in years," Helen returned.

"No, it isn't that reason," Warren returned. "It's because you attracted more attention. You never used to buy suits for that reason, before."

"I don't buy suits for that reason now," flared Helen. "But I get tired of conservative clothes. They always look the same. You might as well buy one suit and, if it would wear without getting shabby, it might do forever. This suit has dash and originality."

"Yes, you will look like all the rest of the paraders along the Great White Way."

"Warren Curtis! How can you say such a thing?"

"Well, don't take up more than I intended by that remark. I simply meant to impress upon you the fact that there is a difference between looking fashionable and looking racy."

"And I thought you would be sure to call it stunning," Helen mourned.

"I would call it stunning, but not on a woman I wanted to go out with. That's my opinion, and I can't change it. If you like the suit and want it, why keep it, of course. I am disappointed that you should have picked out anything like that, though, and that's a fact."

HELEN IS DISAPPOINTED

Helen turned away and went into her own room, where the much talked-of creation lay spread out. She had felt so elated when she bought it that morning, and now to have Warren disapprove of it so radically just changed her whole appreciation of the beautiful thing.

And it was beautiful. It was a light shade of the popular mustard color trimmed with bands and beads of sealskin. A little round sealskin muff went with it, and the costume had cost Helen one hundred and twenty-five dollars. Part of this amount she had saved out of her own money, so that part of it had not bothered her at all. But the truth of the matter was Helen had bought the costume on the spur of the moment and now that it was sent home and Warren had disapproved, she was beginning to wonder herself whether she really liked it. She did wish that she had not been so impetuous and that she had gotten herself into this fuss.

The door opened, and Helen heard Warren welcoming the Bells. She debated for a second as to whether to show the suit to Babbie. Of course she would, she decided suddenly. What was the use of hiding it away as though she were ashamed of it. She would show it to Babbie and get her opinion on it, and once Warren heard Tom and Babbie approve he might be willing to admit that he had been at least hasty.

The next minute Tom and Babbie were talking in the hall, and Helen had called Babbie to come in and take off her things.

"I am just tired to death," Babbie said, looking as if she had never experienced a tiring moment. "It's the most exhausting thing to move, but, oh, Helen, how perfectly great it is to be back in the city again! No more suburban jaunts for us until we make enough to have a really stunning place not too far out."

"I'm so glad you're actually in the city," Helen said enthusiastically. "It hardly seems possible that you are going to be so near to us in the future."

"Ooh!" Babbie was exclaiming, with widening eyes looking at the gorgeous thing spread across the bed. "What is this wonderful thing, Helen? A new suit.

"That's just what it is," Helen said, her enthusiasm beginning to return now that Babbie was approving. "I want you to tell me what you think of it, Warren does not approve at all."

She lifted the coat from the bed as she spoke and slipped it on over her dark house dress. Babbie stood off and surveyed her for a moment.

"It's perfectly gorgeous," she said finally. "And you must have paid a lot for it. Let's see the skirt. I'm crazy about it, Helen."

Helen was not satisfied. She saw that Babbie was raving about the suit, but as an outsider would do, not as if she really liked it.

A SWIFT QUESTION

Helen looked at her for a moment and smiled. The she said suddenly:

"Why, don't you like it?"

Babbie flushed. "Oh, Helen, I do like it, but somehow I don't like it on you. To tell you the truth, I don't like it at all on you. Now, I know you could kill me for saying that."

Helen was considering the subject and did not speak for a moment, and then her brow cleared.

"Warren hates it, too," she said laughingly; "and now that you have both disapproved I am beginning to hate the thing."

"You could exchange it for something just as rich and not so loud," Babbie said, beginning to give a direct opinion now that she saw how Helen was taking it. "Somehow, Helen, you have too definite a personality to cover up in a suit like that. Too many women of the wrong kind like that sort of thing, and you are so different, somehow. I do hope you won't think me an interfering meddler, Helen, but you asked me, and I am telling you just what I think."

"DANDY" FIFTH ON HOMEWARD JOURNEY

By BERT FORD.

El Paso, Tex., Oct. 14.—The "Dandy" Fifth of Massachusetts is on its way home, Colonel Willis W. Stover's infantry command left El Paso with a rollicking sendoff from the men of the Eighth and Ninth.

The Fifth were glad to go and the men of the Eighth and Ninth longed to start with them, but the remaining regiments will be moving North by the first of next week. That was sufficient consolation as they saw their comrades evacuate the southern end of the Bay State infantry camp after close to four months' Federal service, all but a week of which was spent on the Mexican border.

BUSY AND STORMY DAY.

The joy of the Fifth in leaving Texas was shown by their celebration. In less than forty-eight hours after returning from the eleven-day hike, Colonel Stover was prepared for the getaway. It was a busy and stormy day yesterday but the torrential rain did not halt the work.

The Fifth's band gave a concert and played "Auld Lang Syne" and "Home, Sweet Home" over and over again and other airs and the men bellowed a chorus. The men admitted that they were almost too impatient to wait.

Major Whitney's battalion left on the first section with Colonel Stover and staff and headquarters company. Major Meredith's battalion and the supply company went next and Major Bowyer's battalion left last with the Winthrop Machine Gun Company. The Fifth's three sections will pass over the same route through New Mexico, Texas, Oklahoma, St. Louis, Cleveland, Albany, Springfield and Worcester.

NUMBERS 1302 MEN.

The Fifth is carrying back 1302 enlisted men and fifty-three officers and ten horses.

Colonel Stover said he felt the tour was in line with the preparedness campaign. He claimed that one of the most striking features, in his opinion, was the failure of the regular army officers to understand and appreciate the militia officers. He thought the improvement in sanitation as compared with the Spanish War was amazing and something for the country to feel proud of.

The Ninth Regiment has not yet received orders to leave nor has the Eighth, but both expect them today or tomorrow, and the impression is that they will be under way by Monday or Tuesday at the latest. It has not yet been decided whether the Ninth or Eighth shall go by the way of New Orleans.

ORDER PROHIBITS PARADE.

An order was issued by Colonel Omar Bundy, department adjutant, which interferes with the plan to parade the Second Massachusetts Brigade in Boston on its return from the Mexican border, in that it directs that out-of-town companies be sent direct to their home stations. It was thought that the three regiments of infantry would be concentrated in Boston to show the people how they look and march after their nearly four months of service along the Rio Grande, but the order will scatter the organizations as the troop trains bearing them pass through Massachusetts. The only way to overcome the Bundy order so far as parade and reception plans go, will be to set a day after the out-of-town companies have visited their homes to gather in Boston for a big turnout.

The Ninth is exempt from this. Colonel Edward L. Logan is given the option to take his full regiment through to Boston, parade it and then send the out-of-town companies home. This privilege is understood to have been obtained from the War Department through Congressman Gallivan.

Troops C, D and B, the signal corps, ambulance company No. 1 and field hospital company No. 2 have arrived in camp here from the hike with the Tenth Division. The men marched every day on the return trip from Las Cruces through intermittent showers and made camp at night in lakes of adobe mud.

The signal corps has been ordered to make ready for their return home. Although no orders have been received for the entrainment of any of the Massachusetts cavalry troops, it was passed around that the entire squadron will be relieved next week when Georgia cavalry arrives here.

First Sergeant Warren Robinson, a Boston school teacher, was elected a second lieutenant of Troop C, and Second Lieutenant Bertrand W. Ashby was advanced to first lieutenant in an election held while the troop was on the hike. Sergeant-Instructor Scott, U. S. A., who was elected second lieutenant of the troop last July, refused the election recently.

'ANSWERING CALL, DISCOVERS ROBBERY

Haverhill, Oct. 14.—Awakened by a call to go to an automobile accident, Dr. William Robinson of Ayers Village, discovered that his house had been entered, shortly after midnight, and that his watch, valued at $200, $16 in money, and three stick pins had been taken from his clothes.

Without waiting to report the robbery the doctor went to the scene of the accident, treated the injured, then returned to the police station. His clothes had been removed from the room he was sleeping in and taken to the kitchen, where the pockets were rifled.

HUGHES WINNER IN HARVARD ELECTION

In a straw ballot conducted by the Harvard Crimson, Charles Evans Hughes polled 1,142 out of a total vote of 1,804, President Wilson's tally was 634 votes with the Socialist candidate, Allan L. Benson, third, with 18 votes. Hanley, the Prohibition leader, was given 10 votes, and Oscar Underwood received a complimentary ballot.

Poalei Zion Convention.

Delegates from all the Eastern States will be present tonight at the opening session of the tenth annual convention of the Poalei Zion Association of America in Lorimer Hall, Tremont Temple.

STOCKS ACTIVE BUT IRREGULAR AT THE CLOSE

Prices on the New York Stock Exchange at the closing of the market today were irregular, with gains and losses about evenly divided.

Trading was not very active, but was frequently enlivened by bear raids. The total volume of business for the two hours was 456,000 shares.

That there was less apprehension as regards the U-boat danger was indicated by the strength of the Allied Marine stocks, the common advancing ¾ and the preferred 1¾.

Atlantic Gulf, another steamship issue, advanced 2¾ points on the theory that this company's vessels, being in coastwise trade, incur but slight danger.

But nearly all the steel stocks were weak. United States Steel went down to 103, the low point established on Monday's big reaction.

Norfolk & Western was again active, advancing on the talk of possibility of an extra dividend.

Important losses at the closing included U. Steel, 1; Colorado Fuel 1¾, Steel Foundries 1, New York Air Brake 1½, Utah Copper, 1, New Haven 1¼ and Maxwell . Gains were mostly fractional.

The local market also closed irregular after a quiet session. As in

American Zinc, Lead and Smelting Co

The Directors of the American Zinc, Lead & Smelting Company have declared a regular quarterly dividend of one dollar and fifty cents ($1.50) upon the preferred capital stock, payable November 1, 1916, to stockholders of record October 21, 1916. S. E. FARWELL, Treasurer.

New York, Atlantic Gulf was a strong feature. Sewall & Company advanced two points to 17⅞ in the closing trade. Boston & Maine gained a point. Other price changes were fractional.

CHURCH NEWS of GREATER BOSTON

In all Universalist pulpits Sunday the topic will be "Righteousness in the Bible," will be preached. This is part of the evangelistic campaign of that denomination which has met with such success through its advertisements in the daily newspapers.

The Rev. George F. Leighton, superintendent of Universalist churches, reports a large and growing demand for literature explaining Universalism. Every pastor of one of the churches of the First Universalist Church, Boston, which is at present holding its meetings in the Copley Square Theatre, says that the advertising campaign has brought to his church increasing demand for special cards and circulars, setting forth certain statements of faith and declaration by the pastors.

The Rev. Edward M. Barney has sent out 25,000 copies of a postal card containing three striking extracts from the social teachings of Universalism.

The Rev. James E. Walker and Mrs. H. Lathrop of the Sunday committee will address the Boston Central W. C. T. U. Monday, at 2:30 p. m., in Myrtle Hall, Tremont Temple.

The Rev. Frederick May Eliot will preach the topic, "Jesus the Art of Worship," November 17, before the Unitarian Sunday School Union in the Arlington Street Church.

The Rev. John Haynes Holmes of New York will make the first address of the season in the Ford Hall meeting November 5, on "The International Mind."

The sessions will be held at 9:30 a. m., 2 and 7:30 p. m.

W. J. Colville, the famous lecturer, will speak before the School of Divine Science, No. 206 Huntington avenue, Monday, at 8 p. m., on "The Way of Initiation."

At the anniversary services Sunday in the First M. E. Church, Dorchester, the love feast will be led by the Rev. Wilbur Herrick, D. D., at 9:30, followed by the anniversary sermon by the pastor, the Rev. John B. Chaffee. At the evening service the Rev. J. W. Johnston, D. D., of Brooklyn, N. Y., a former pastor, will preach.

"The Real Billy Sunday" in the topic for the sermon at St. Mark's M. E. Church, Roxbury, by the Rev. Fred W. P. Odell. For the first time a Sunday hymn book will be used at this service.

The Rev. Herbert A. Jump, lately of Redlands, Cal., will give an illustrated lecture on "Some Scenes and Characters from California Scenery," in the Maverick Congregational Church, Sunday evening.

Miss Mary Lawrence will speak on "The Purpose of the Sunday School Church," at the meeting of the Sunday School Union in Arlington Street Church, Monday, at 2:30 p. m.

Congregational churches will begin tomorrow planning for the observance of the tercentenary of the Pilgrims, which will be observed formally in 1920. They will raise in the next four years $2,000,000 annually for missions and try to add 1,000 church members.

Fred A. Coleman will speak before the Congregational ministers at their meeting Monday on "Impressions of Japan and China."

SAVE FOUR AFTER 10 HOURS IN OPEN BOAT

Captain Charles W. Publicover and three members of the crew of the three-masted schooner Helen F. Hasbrouck, abandoned at sea in the northwest gale stripped her of her sails and rigging, and, after drifting 10 hours out of her, were brought into Boston on the steamship Saxon Monarch, from Glasgow. They were picked up in the vicinity of Seal Island, after having spent more than forty hours drifting in a dory.

All the men are from La Have, N. S., and include Captain Publicover, seventy years old, father of the captain; Clay Belle and Locke Adams.

Washington, Oct. 14.—Secretary Daniels has announced that he will leave Sunday night to make political addresses in Indiana, Kentucky, Missouri, Iowa, Nebraska and Kansas.

PRESIDENT WILL ANSWER HUGHES

Shadow Lawn, Long Branch, N. J., Oct. 14.—One of the features of President Wilson's speech to Pennsylvania Democrats this afternoon was expected to be an adroit reply to Charles Evans Hughes' declarations as to what he would have done in the Lusitania incident.

It has been the President's policy to avoid direct discussion of diplomatic affairs in his political speeches, but the President's adviser felt that Mr. Hughes' allusion was of such a character that a reference to it should be made.

President Wilson's advisers are also expecting a reply from Hughes to his trip to Omaha and Indianapolis. They believe that all uncertainty as to the attitude of the Republican leader is now over.

At Sea Thursday President Wilson will speak in Chicago and he plans to cut loose in that address to riddle arguments advanced by Mr. Hughes

SYMPHONY OFF IN MID-SEASON FORM

A minute of handicapping, as Dr. Muck ascended the conductor's stand, ushered in the thirty-sixth season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the unchallenged champions of the musical world, yesterday afternoon.

Symptoms of the new method of selling tickets for the Symphony was obvious, for every seat was taken, and all of the familiar faces of previous years seemed to be in evidence.

One of the most hopeful signs for the future of the orchestra is the increasing number of young people who are attending the rehearsals. Around no seats in previous years have been so many heads of grey or white haired ladies. This Winter atmosphere has been relieved by the introduction of many flaxen, black and red heads. And it seemed to me as though similar changes were to be noticed in other parts of the auditorium.

The concert was a particularly attractive one. Dr. Muck began appropriately with the "Star Spangled Banner" followed it with Berlioz's "Corsair" overture. Liszt's "Mazeppa" and the Tchaikowsky-Auer "Merry Peasant" Richard Strauss.

The orchestra was in mid-season form, barring a few traces of roughness in the symphony, and some poor phrasing by the horns in the finale of the Beethoven masterpiece. That splendid and glowing tribute to the valor of Richard Strauss' native place, and stands comparisons with more modern compositions as successfully as Napoleon himself compared with modern generals.

Berlioz's "Corsair" is a comparatively little known composition, being and gallant overture, and it enjoyed a spirited performance. Lively rip-roaring, onward rushing, slambang description in sound of the ride of Mazeppa, bound naked to the back of a wild horse of Urania, is one of the most effective of all compositions for a big orchestra.

Richard Strauss's jocose tone poem, "Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks," closed the program. There is rather more lightness and tunefulness in "Till" than in the more recent works of Strauss, but if you were to guage Till's conduct from the music you wouldn't say he was very merry. We are to see Till himself perform these pranks to the Strauss music when Nijinsky comes with the Russian ballet early next month.

ENGLAND TRIES TO RESTRICT THE INTERNATIONAL NEWS

Not Exactly Sportsmanlike, but Typical of England. The Effort Will Not Succeed

Copyright, 1916, by the Star Company.

THE International News, collecting information all over the world and then transmitting it ACCURATELY to the United States for the benefit of the people of the United States, does not please England. Editorials in the Hearst newspapers, telling plain truths about the war, please England even less.

News that England has suppressed the International News Service of America was published here quite naturally.

The English believe that the newspapers of the world should co-operate with England in the effort to distort facts, exaggerating English victories and the misfortunes of her enemies, utterly concealing English defeats and misfortunes.

Certain American news agencies appear to have gratified England's desire in this direction. But the International News, which represents the Hearst newspapers and other newspapers, did not take the English view of the matter. In a news way the International News annoyed England often. For instance:

When Namur fell before German attack the English people were not allowed to know of it. The International News published it in the Hearst and other papers twenty-four hours before any other paper published it—and the news filtered back to England.

On October 6, two years ago, the International News Service stated definitely—the statement being based upon accurate information—that "Antwerp would fall within a week." Three days later the Germans took the city.

The English did not like that. It offends them to have anybody think that England can fail.

This was particularly offensive to England because its policy at that time was, "Let the French and others be killed while we talk."

On October 17, 1914, the International News Service announced the capture of Ostend by the Germans—forty-eight hours ahead of all other newspapers. The English government, of course, knew about Ostend, but did not care to have others know it. That was another black mark against the International News for accurate and prompt news-telling.

In November of 1914 the British super-dreadnought Audacious was sunk by a German submarine off the northernmost point of Ireland. The British did not intend that England or anybody else should know of this if it could be avoided. The International News printed the facts forty-eight hours ahead of any other publication, and sent out for distribution an actual photograph of the sinking of the Audacious, the photograph being taken from the steamer Olympic, which witnessed the sinking of the Audacious, and the news being sent through the International News by a man on the Olympic.

The International News announced in advance that England would annex Egypt. Anybody might have predicted that with safety. Nothing in English history indicates lack of willingness to annex ANYTHING when the proper moment arrives.

Such are a few of the International News activities that have hurt England's feelings. Now comes the news that England has forbidden the International News Service the use of the English mails or cables. This act, typically English, representing English customs and English "sportsmanship" so thoroughly, is a compliment, and will not prove itself to be any menace to the International News Service.

If the International News Service did not know how to get and transmit by mail or by cable the news in spite of England it would not amount to much.

The English do not and cannot allege any display of unfairness by the International News as against England.

The International News has simply refused to be unfair to its own American readers, to suppress news of English defeats, magnify news of English victories, and act as though the United States were a British province and the English government possessed power of censorship here. It is the EDITORIAL policy and utterances of Hearst newspapers that have most seriously wounded English sensibilities. Yet where the English have deserved praise they have had it from the Hearst newspapers and from others served by the International News Service.

Their one man in this war is Lloyd George.

Years before the war, when every respectability in England denounced Lloyd George, hated and despised him, the Hearst newspapers printed editorials pointing out that he was the strongest man England had, and the ablest democrat developed there in one hundred years.

If the English had understood their own Lloyd George as well as we did here in America, and had given him early the authority that they gave him late, it would have been well for them.

From England's allies we have not withheld praise where it was deserved, or condemnation where it was deserved.

The marvelous heroism of the French and of the Belgians, the desperate, relentless, endless courage of the French nation and its magnificent intelligence we have especially and constantly praised.

We displeased England, probably, by expressing our regret more than once that the French should have been tied in the early years of the war to England, a nation that would talk and lend money, but WOULD NOT FIGHT, a nation that kept all of its "brave fighting men" well fed at home, marching up and down safely on English soil, while the French were dying in the trenches in hundreds of thousands.

Of England's ally Russia we have also told the truth.

We pointed out the distressing fact that intelligent, free France was fighting with England to increase the power of Russian brutality. We expressed our hope that every foot of soil taken from Russia by Germany WOULD REMAIN GERMAN, and therefore see no more of wholesale murder, based on religious hatred and commercial jealousy.

We pointed out quite frankly the fact that England did not risk a man or a ship willingly until Russia threatened to take Constantinople. Then England rushed in, sacrificed men, ships and money in order that she might take Constantinople first, and prevent that city falling into the hands of her dear ally Russia.

We made it clear that England, while denouncing Turkish brutality for years and weeping crocodile tears over murdered Armenians, had been careful to keep the Turk in power in Constantinople in order to keep Russia out.

In the regular course of news we had to point out, day after day, the inefficiency of England in that attack upon the miserable Turks, led by a few competent Germans.

It was necessary to show that the great and glorious fleet of England did nothing, and sailed away confessing defeat—just as the Turks themselves were ready to succumb because they hadn't any more ammunition.

This did not please England, but the International News Service and the Hearst newspapers are not in business to please England. Their work is telling the people of the United States what happens.

The International News and the Hearst newspapers, and as many other newspapers as represent United States interests, have spoken frankly of England and the other powers interested, not only as regards their attitude on the other side of the ocean, but their attitude and their attempted activities here.

We have displeased England, may it please you, because we have objected to English interference with United States citizens and United States mails.

We have irritated England's assumption of world-wide omnipotence because we objected to an English blacklist which included scores of American business men.

England felt that it was her right to say not only to her own citizens, but to citizens of the United States: "You shall deal with nations and individuals as WE say and not otherwise." We did not agree with this theory.

We have resented publicly, emphatically and repeatedly the orders of England, humbly obeyed here in the United States, orders which compel American business men shipping goods to go before a BRITISH CONSUL and swear in detail as to the nature of their transactions.

We have maintained that the United States had a right to control the mails of the United States.

We have advocated using the battleships of this country to carry our mails to foreign neutral ports, believing that England, which possesses her share of the bully's caution, would probably not seize mails on board of an American battleship.

In short, the International News Service and the Hearst newspapers, being American institutions, have been run AS AMERICAN INSTITUTIONS.

And England, not without intelligence, attacks the International News Service alone among the services that send out news to the world, and seeks to interrupt its unpleasant truth-telling activities.

War is war; the English have never been noted for any delicacy in using any power such as they might have.

Every dog hunts according to its race, the French say. And this English action is typically British—as typically British as was the employment of North American Indians to murder American men, women and children of British blood in the American colonies.

"Do it if you can, no matter how you do it," is the British motto.

But in this case, the "do it anyhow" method will fail.

The International News Service will continue to print the news, print it as early as possible, print it ahead of a good many others, and print it EXACTLY AS IT HAPPENS, not as England would like to have it twisted, painted, distorted and arranged to suit British vanity or British incompetency.

And the Hearst newspapers will continue editorially to express their thought and the thought of their readers, not English thought. The Constitution of the United States is the law in the United States. That Constitution includes FREEDOM OF THE PRESS.

And that Constitution is based on an incident—also warlike—that England has not forgotten, we guess.

Join the Hunt

By James J. Montague

BEFORE the tiger starts to bite he growls his hideous delight,
Which gives one time to run and climb
The nearest tree and foil him.
The evil-hearted rattlesnake the warning on his tail will shake,
Which you can hear and disappear,
Before he can uncoil him.

THE shark will churn the sea to spray before he falls upon his prey,
And one can swim away from him
And chuckle "I should worry!"
And when the cobra spreads his hood you gather that he means no good,
And so repair away from there
In somewhat of a hurry.

BUT when the little busy fly decides that you are due to die
He gives no sign of his malign
And murderous intention.
And though he covers you with germs described in awesome Latin terms,
You walk about all day without
The slightest apprehension.

HUNT down the creature night and day, let no base housefly get away,
Keep up the chase in every case
Until you're sure you've got him.
While he's alive you never know what moment he will lay you low,
So sound the cry, "The fly must die!"
And Swat him! Swat him! Swat him!

Once-Overs

Every one, young or old, should engage in some sort of study which requires thought. Matters complex and difficult should be taken up and studied thoughtfully, if for no other reason than the discipline of mind.

Any part of the body which does not get exercise loses its power. Conserve and strengthen the brain power by systematic thought and study, if not more than five minutes every day; but let it be real out-and-out concentration—that five minutes.

A Super-Straw Ballot on Presidential Election

First Returns in on Nation-Wide Poll—Football Features for Sunday Readers—Lotta on Birth Control.

WHERE are the voters of yesteryear?

Or, rather, of yester-presidential election?

Where do they stand today? How will they vote?

The Sunday AMERICAN will publish tomorrow the first of a series of weekly reports or returns on a national presidential straw ballot, taken by the Hearst newspapers and assisting publications.

This is the biggest straw ballot, the broadest in scope, ever taken. It is being conducted as carefully as possible. Tomorrow's initial report will show returns from the largest eastern cities of Massachusetts.

With the returns on this straw ballot for the presidential race of 1916 will be shown comparison of how these voters cast their ballots four years ago.

On the report is based a thoughtful analysis of what these returns indicate. The whole forms an extremely interesting ante-election story.

A notable interview on a much-argued subject.

The interview is given by a woman widely known and loved in Boston. She has been famous fifty years as an actress, as a shrewd business woman and, at the same time, as a woman of tender heart and quick sympathies.

Lotta Crabtree is the woman. And the subject of her interview is "Birth Control."

Here is just a sentence from Lotta's views:

"The white slaver is sent to jail for a few months; the man who tries to teach birth control is sentenced to three years in prison."

That is the beginning of a wonderful interview with one of Boston's most wonderful women. It forms a special feature of tomorrow's paper.

The record which the AMERICAN made for itself in the World's Series for splendid reports of the games by baseball specialists and feature writers is carried right into the football season.

Pigskin followers will find the AMERICAN indispensable tomorrow. Walter Camp, the "Father of American Football," as he is called, will write on "Fumbling in Football—Its Causes and Cures."

"Tacks" Hardwick, the Harvard coach and former varsity halfback, will review today's game between Harvard and North Carolina in the Stadium.

In addition to these articles by experts of nation-wide football fame, the AMERICAN will cover all the big college and school contests.

There will be a particularly full report of the Tufts-Princeton game in the Tigers' lair today on account of the keen interest in this match. Tufts' defeat of Harvard last Saturday makes the players from the home of Jumbo a mighty interesting prospect just now.

What ruins more men than any other cause?

"Ignorant and extravagant wives," says Miss Helen Temple Cooke. She is the head of Dana Hall School for Girls at Wellesley.

This is not Wellesley College. Dana Hall happens to be in the town of Wellesley. Many Dana Hall girls later attend the college, but the institutions are separate.

Fifty girls at Dana Hall are taking a post-graduate course in homemaking. They are being educated and prepared to superintend homes—not institutions—but their own homes.

Miss Cooke says: "Of what value to a girl, as a wife and mother, is a knowledge of the anatomy of a cat?"

She says this in the course of a long and absorbing interview, which the AMERICAN prints tomorrow, on this home-keeping course at Dana Hall on what girls need and what is taught.

Billy Sunday draws nearer and nearer to Boston. He is due here the second week of November. So is the Reverend Washington Gladden, D. D., of Columbus, O.

But they will not arrive in company. They are opposed—at least Dr. Gladden is bitterly opposed to Billy Sunday. The Columbus divine comes here again to give his impressions of the revivalist. The AMERICAN will have a timely "Sunday" article tomorrow, with the news about Dr. Gladden and other activities "touchin' on and appertainin' to" the Reverend Mr. Sunday.

The "Girl-Saving" squad of the Boston police—more professionally known as the "Vice" squad, has a lesson for Boston mothers. Some of the men in this squad tell how the work is done, how girls have been saved and—this is the point for the mothers to catch—how the girl's waywardness is often the fault of the mother in the first place.

Wellesley College is thinking of making over the American woman's voice.

There is a plan under consideration at this famous educational institution for exterminating the Yankee twang, with its sharp nasal tone, and substituting for it a broader and more pleasing accent.

Miss Melvina Bennett, the head of the Department of Reading and Speaking at the college tried the voices of 478 freshmen and reported on them to the faculty. Miss Bennett's view of the voice situation forms an article of lively interest. She says, for instance:

"I think the prevalent harshness of the American voice is due to our American haste. Our climate keys us up to keen nervous tension, and the result is a constriction of the vocal cords, making narrow vowel sounds and harshening tone."

Miss Bennett explains at length what faults need correcting in American enunciation.

The Quarantine Man, isn't he imprudent? He shut up 200 girls in a Back Bay dormitory and said to them: "Stay in and don't come out."

Think of it. But there they are, right in the big college quarters. But they are making the best of it, as American girls always do.

What they do; how they drive dull care away is entertaining reading.

Memory

THERE is a hill called Memory, and, stretching far below,
Wrapped in a golden mist, there lies the Land of Long Ago.
And there are shining rivers there, that ripple all day long,
And birds that thrill the morning air with ecstasies of song.
The sunshine falls in silver flakes across the forest floor,
But sunlight, birds and streams are ours to dream of, and no more.

AND you—you lived among them once—you heard the robin sing,
Upon the bough that still was bare, and knew that it was Spring!
And when the frosty twilight fell beyond the river's rim
You watched for him to come again to chant his evening hymn.
But then, when Time's unpitying hand had barely touched your brow,
You could not know how sweet it was—but, ah! you know it now!

NOR could you know how wonderful were all the radiant flowers
Whose gentle faces smiled at you through all the careless hours;
Nor what a miracle the stream, that crept so softly by
And carried, mirrored in its depths, the trees and clouds and sky.
You never even sought to hold this glowing beauty fast,
Till now—too late—you see it, in the Valley of the Past!
